'No More Midnight Legislation'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE and BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Premier Barrett passionately defended Wednesday his public statements about eventual government takeover of B.C. Tel, saying he will never spring the move on the company without warning.

The NDP government will never use the "midnight legislation" technique of the former Social Credit government when it bought B.C. Electric in 1960, Barrett said.

His comments came during the throne speech debate after the Socred opposition moved non-confidence with an amendment to adopt part of former premier Bennett's so-called Kelowna Charter.

The house adjourned at 6 p.m. and debate on the amendment continues today.

The premier said the economy of British Columbia "has never been stronger" than it is today and said his announced policies of increasing the old age pension will help create more jobs through increased spending power by pensioners.

Barrett's statement came after mounting attacks from opposition parties over his public statements on economic matters, particularly on the takeover of industries.

He was accused of doing nothing to create jobs, and of contributing to unemployment by frightening investors and causing a drop in confidence in the provincial economy, and depressing the stock market.

Former labor minister James Chabot focused the attack when he moved an amendment to the throne speech and said the issues of inflation and unemployment were ignored.

An apparent attempt earlier by the NDP to dispose quickly of the throne speech debate failed after whips from the Liberals and Socreds did not show up for a planned meeting at 9 a.m.

After the speech was moved and seconded by NDP MLAs after the house sat at 2 p.m., Socred house leader Frank Richter suggested the speech be adopted forthwith, but he did not request a definite motion to that effect, and merely took his seat.

It appeared the debate might end after short speeches from each party, but Pat McGeer (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) spoke at length and Chabot followed.

Barrett said he found it confusing that the opposition at first suggested a speedy end to the debate and then moved its amendment.

Barrett said the "atmosphere" of the B.C. economy is good and said "there is no depression, as suggested by some opposition members.

"Our economy has never been stronger," he said.

The premier said that what he expects from industry is no more than what the Social

3,000-YEAR PRISON TERM

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Terry Eugene Culley, 21, has been sentenced to 3,000 years in prison, the longest term ever assessed by a Dallas jury, for the murder of insurance broker Jean Geron.

The jury of nine men and three women in Judge James Zimmermann's criminal district court fixed the penalty Wednesday for Culley. Culley pleaded guilty in the case but chose to have a jury set punishment.

Federal Bilingualism Costly Flop—Report

By CLAUDE LEMELIN
Special to The Times — Copyright Le Devoir

MONTREAL — Costly efforts to foster bilingualism in the federal public service have bogged down dismally, according to confidential reports by treasury board officials.

After making a $250,000 study of the bilingual programs, the officials have recommended sweeping changes to give French-speaking public servants more influence at the top levels and more latitude to use French as their working language.

The treasury board handles all staff-relations questions for the federal government. Its personnel-branch reports are always kept confidential. The department has no jurisdiction over crown corporations, such as Air Canada, Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

In more than a dozen volumes drafted over the past six months, the authors reached the following conclusions:

—The Official Languages Act, passed by parliament in December, and companion regulations approved since then by the cabinet of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, are being "persistently and systematically violated" by departments and agencies.

—The translation bureau has quadrupled its budget since 1966, but still cannot cope with the avalanche of paper from bureaucrats who make "gross, deliberate abuse" of translators' services. The backlog exceeds 9 million words.

—In several branches of government, the bilingual drive has petered out because some key, English-speaking officials show a serious lack of co-operation or a tendency to undermine official objectives. The task force itself nearly was disbanded because of "high-level pressure" on the cabinet.

—Despite all the talk about "French power in Ottawa," French Canadians held only 88 of the top 610 positions in the public service last year, or 14.4 per cent of these jobs. About 27 per cent of all Canadians give their mother tongue as French.

—The public service commission continues to hire an unduly large proportion of persons who speak only English, meaning that Francophone representation will drop rather than increase in the executive and technical classifications.

It costs the taxpayers $29,000 to teach the second of ficial language to one civil servant, and the failure rate still is 92 per cent.

The task force found that in a four-year period ending in the spring of 1970, a total of 6,463 public servants dropped out of the language courses without qualifying for any credits.

This represented a 'lost investment' of $17-million con-

RYAN DEMANDS INVESTIGATION

Times News Services

Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, is asking language commissioner Keith Spicer to investigate reports that federal agencies and departments regularly violate the Official Languages Act.

In a registered letter mailed Wednesday night, Ryan cited confidential government reports obtained and used by his Montreal daily, charging that bilingualism policies are threatened with "total failure."

He enclosed the documents with his letter and reminded Spicer that any Canadian citizen can request an investigation into alleged language inequities under Section 26 of the act.

Ryan's letter to Spicer, which appears on Le Devoir's editorial page, says French-speaking public servants have lost ground under the Liberal government, despite "astronomical" expenditures on language programs.

Meanwhile, treasury Board President C. M. Drury said today statistics contained in the report are outdated. The 1975 target date for a functionally bilingual public service "still appears to be realistic."

He said the studies published by the newspaper were for the purpose of gathering information as the basis for the report, and were never intended for publication.

Drury said it is "embarrassing" when papers not designed for public consumption are published in newspapers, and his department is trying to discover how the leak occurred.

Tories Unveil Tax Plan

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

TORONTO — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield today unveiled a far-reaching plan that would allow individual Canadians to defer income tax payments to the federal government and invest it in small Canadian-owned businesses.

Stanfield, speaking to the influential Empire Club meeting at the Royal York Hotel here, said his party's Canadian investment credit incentive plan would do more in a single year to stimulate the economy and create new jobs than any combination of government handouts and incentives now available.

The Conservative leader, in his major economic speech of the election campaign to date, told his 1,400-strong audience of businessmen the plan will allow the individual Canadian the same tax deferment opportunities now available to large corporations.

Stanfield said that as well as giving opportunities for investment to the average Canadian it would also provide much-needed pools of capital to small Canadian businesses wanting to expand.

Under the plan, the taxpayer would have the option of paying his total income tax bill to the revenue department or withholding some of it for approved investment in small business enterprises.

When the investor decided to pull his stakes out of the company he would then return his deferred tax money to the federal government and pay capital gains tax on his profits.

In simple terms, the plan enables the taxpayer to make profits on money he would normally give to Ottawa.

"This investment credit will be available to any Canadian citizen who makes a direct investment in the equity of a Canadian-owned business.

"The credit, which will be 50 per cent of qualified investment to a maximum $5,000 each year, will be either offset against the individual's income tax for the year or rebated direct to him.

Star Cuts Liberals

Times News Services

TORONTO — Toronto Star said today in an editorial that on the basis of the issues of unemployment and Canadian independence it has withdrawn its support from the Liberals for the first time in 50 years.

"Of the alternatives, both of which are unattractive, we prefer the Conservatives," the editorial said.

The editorial, over the initials of president and publisher Beland Honderich, said The Star has consistently supported the Liberals since the early 1920s "in the belief that the things this paper has stood for — unemployment insurance, health insurance, Canadian independence and the like — would most likely be achieved through a Liberal government."

"The performance of the Trudeau government over the past four years, particularly in the broad economic area, has forced us to re-examine this traditional performance. We have now concluded, reluctantly, that we must register a strong protest against the government's stand on economic policy and Canadian independence."

Your Federal Candidates

Starting today and running through next Tuesday, the Times in this space will present in-depth interviews by staff reporters with the 10 candidates for election in the Oct. 30 federal election for the two seats in the Greater Victoria area.

In these interviews the candidates express their views and are questioned on the issues. Two interviews will be presented each day and the order of appearance was decided by a random draw.

TISDALLE Esquimalt-Saanich

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Never have so few people owned so much and done so little with it.

The paraphrase of Winston Churchill's famous words was coined by Esquimalt-Saanich candidate John Tisdalle, and his belief in that statement is equalled only by the conviction that Social Credit's fiscal policies are the sole hope of rephrasing it.

"That's what inspires me and drives me on to the federal field, where the machinery exists to make changes," he says.

"My greatest concern all my life has been the paradox that a country — populated originally, when I could first figure out figures, by 10 million people and now by 20 million living in half a continent — faces misery, starvation and want and yet has the greatest wealth in the world."

Tisdalle, 55, is something unique — a longtime Socred ex-member of the provincial legislature who did not receive the kiss of death from the oh-so-unpredictable voters in last August's provincial election.

His downfall came earlier in a less spectacular but perhaps more pointed way, when, after representing Saanich and The Islands for 19 years, he failed to get the nomination from disenchanted constituency Socreds.

But now, re-appearing phoenix-like after getting the nod for the federal contest in preference to vanquished MLA Herb Bruch, Tisdalle says he didn't regard that earlier turn-down as a rude rebuff, just "pure and simple politics."

Pressed for an explanation, he speculates the voting was

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Incumbent Liberal MP for Victoria, David Groos, sees himself as the guardian of ecology on this coast in spite of the fact that he spends most of the time away from it in Ottawa and abroad as a Canadian government representative.

He says that the threatened oil tanker route and danger of pollution is viewed as a "purely western" problem in Ottawa.

He gives his main reason for running again to straighten out the complete problem of control of traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

"There are certain things that will not be done," he says, "unless I'm there sitting on top of it."

He lists some of them — harbors of refuge, switching of responsibility for pollution clean-up and marine rescue to the Canadian Armed Forces, instead of the Ministry of Transport.

The 54-year-old ex-navy captain wears his clothes casually, and flashes an affable smile. The combination gives the impression of a man easy to approach.

But some complain he's a hard man to reach. An unlisted home phone number (Groos retains an answering service) means only intimates can contact him directly.

Groos answers these criticisms.

"I have a wife and four kids. My number was listed for the first three years. I couldn't expect them to take all the calls."

He says it's not the number of calls that bothered him. It

Inflation, Strike Cut Pound

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to its lowest level in 22 months today under a wave of selling orders from continental centres. In two hours of hectic trading it dropped 1.5 cents.

Dealers said the pound apparently came under attack as a result of inflation and the threat of a national power strike. (See Page 33).

This was its lowest level since December, 1970. Sterling had lost more than 15 cents since June 22, when the British government freed the pound to float to halt a run on the pound.

Meanwhile in Paris, the nine nations of the European Common Market met at the summit today to celebrate their growth and plan their future but immediately split over the issue of unity.

After smiles and waves to spectators leaders of the 250-million-person community marched indoors and issued statements lauding their growing wealth and vowing to avoid battling other trade bloc powers, principally the United States.

ULSTER COOLS OFF

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland backed off from the brink of disaster late Wednesday night with an announcement by Protestant guerrillas that "our war with the British army is over."

After two nights of widespread shooting and rioting which claimed at least four dead and 80 wounded and culminated in troops fighting both Protestant and Roman Catholic diehards, the statement brought quick relief for the battered and bloodied province. At least 614 persons have been killed in three years of communal strife

Some rioting and gunfire continued late into the night, but on a gradually decreasing scale until army headquarters reported all quiet soon after midnight Wednesday night.

Crofton Employees Win Fight

CROFTON — Employees at the Crofton Pulp and Paper mill have won their battle to keep a garbage contractor out of the mill, following a two-day work stoppage.

The contractor, C and W. Disposal Limited, will no longer come to the mill premises unless authorized by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

The majority of the 700 employees walked out Monday over the long dispute with the company using outside contractors to haul garbage from the mill. The union felt the contractor should not be doing a job that union members used to do.

The dispute came to a head after the company had not completed a conveyer belt from the foreshore of the mill to a recovery boiler to burn garbage.

After a four-hour meeting Wednesday, company officials agreed to have burnable garbage stockpiled until the conveyer belt is completed. Unburnable garbage will be moved by union members off the mill site to a construction camp, where C and W Disposal will pick it up and take it to the incinerator.

"Qualifying investments will include new equity shares of corporations and direct participation in a proprietorship or partnership," said Stanfield.

In order for the credit to be granted, the business will be required to register with the federal industry, trade and commerce department.

Small businesses will include corporations with a net worth up to $1 million and annual revenues up to $10 million.

In the case of corporations approaching the upper size limitations, it will be necessary to establish that new capital requirements will provide substantial additional jobs and careers in Canada.

No corporation will be able to qualify as a small business if its shares are listed on a stock exchange or if it's controlled by a corporation which does not qualify.

"Certain kinds of business will not qualify for investment credit. For example, oil and gas exploration businesses, mining businesses and the like. Similarly, real estate ownership and development, leasing and financial businesses will not qualify," said Stanfield.

The advantage of the new tax credit will remain with the investor as long as he continues to hold it, but will be repayable to the government if and when the investment is realized.

If the investor does not recover his full investment, the amount of credit repayable to the government will be half of his recovery.

No capital loss deduction will be allowed if the investor realizes a gain. The gain will be taxable in the ordinary way.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Wednesday in Wingham, Ont., that his government, if re-elected Oct. 30, will consider "a lot" of proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act following criticism of the legislation during the campaign.

One of the Liberal candidates, Charles Thomas, of Huron, said that if elected he will be making one of the proposals himself.

Thomas outlined his proposal on an open line television program here, during which a number of callers criticized the fact that many on unemployment insurance will not take jobs available, presumably because they don't want to lose the benefits they get from the scheme.

MUCH TALK

"I'm sure there will be a lot of amendments proposed to the Unemployment Insurance Act," Trudeau replied, "because there has been a lot of talk about it during the campaign.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield took a one day rest from the campaign trail. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette continued a swing through Quebec, asking for a chance to make his party the dominant one in opposition to the Liberals.

New Democratic Leader David Lewis found a new focus for his battle against the "corporate rip off" Wednesday when he said government are paying too little attention to the needs of farmers and too much to the privileges of corporations.

INSENSITIVE

Lewis, speaking at his second rally of the day in the grain-growing Peace River area, accused the federal government of "insensitive insanity," leading to the death of the family farm.

He deplored the fact that the average age of farmers now is in the 50s and that youngsters must seek jobs in cities because they cannot afford to remain on the land.

He predicted the rural population drain would lead to achievement of a government goal within one generation: Farmland would be swallowed up by large corporations and the values of rural life would be gone.

In Vegreville, Alta., "Diefenmania" erupted in this farming community of 3,600 Wednesday night.

A crowd estimated by police at 500 was at the airport to greet former prime minister John Diefenbaker and later an auditorium normally seating 2,000 was jammed for a 90-minute speech.

About 600 others who couldn't get in watched the address on closed-circuit television.

Diefenbaker also said the New Democratic Party does not tell the whole truth — "all countries have incentives for industrial growth" — and Lewis masks a platform that includes nationalization of some sectors of industry and commerce.

The former Progressive Conservative added that Canada needs to bring in price and wage controls to beat inflation.

Trudeau collected a string of 53rd birthday cakes Wednesday.

At Mississauga, just west of Toronto, he collected the first one in the morning. From there on, it was an unbroken sequence of Happy Birthdays.

In Granby, Que., Raymond Laliberte, Quebec New Democratic Party leader, told a group of students Wednesday that separatists should vote for the NDP, even if it is only a question of strategy.

If the Parti Quebecois should take power in Quebec, independence could only come after, negotiations with the federal government, the candidate in Montreal Hochelaga told junior college students in this town 4 miles east of Montreal.

Therefore, he said, it is in the interest of the Parti Quebecois that the NDP be the government in Ottawa because of his party's stand on separatism.

This, he said, was that industry get no handouts, and that it not pollute. He also pointed to B.C's rich resources, its labor force, and its low taxation rates."

Barrett recalled that during the election campaign he said his government would take over the B.C. Tel "monopoly" "and no free-enterpriser" would be against disrupting a monopoly.

He said he is being attacked for keeping his election promises. Takeover of B.C. Tel has been NDP policy for years.

Recalling that the NDP had also advocated taking over the B.C. Electric Company, the Bennett government had opposed this policy and "then they brought in midnight legislation."

This was the surprise bill that created the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and bought out B.C. Electric.

"As long as we are in power . . ." Barrett said, "never will there be midnight legislation in this province."

"Everyone will know exactly" when any similar move is made by the government, he said.

Barrett then turned on criticisms that his government was doing nothing to create jobs.

"Don't anybody tell me that the expenditure of funds doesn't create jobs, and don't tell me that increases to pensions doesn't create jobs."

Barrett said the NDP "doesn't believe in jungle capitalism to create jobs." It believes in sharing the wealth of the province.

OLD RIP-OFF

He said no one is suggesting that B.C. go back to "the old days of rip-off capitalism" and depletion of natural resources, but that the economy of the province, and its condition as a result of statements by the premier of the province is important to people who are trying to find jobs in B.C.

He said it is time the NDP made clear what its exact policy is regarding takeover of private companies, as much in the case of B.C. Tel as in the forest industry.

Anderson said the Liberals would support the amendment because Barrett "has failed miserably" in setting out a rational economic policy for the province and has only contributed to disruption in the province's financial state.

But now that a session has been called, there should be a debate on policies announced by Barrett in press conferences held "in the relaxed atmosphere of the Empress Hotel or the Premier's office."

Barrett's statements about eventual takeover of B.C. Tel and two natural gas distribution companies were "careless and ill-considered," Anderson said.

In proposing the Socred amendment, Chabot charged that Barrett has "shocked" the business community of the province with "wild and irresponsible" statements.

He called Barrett's policies a "retrenchment" and said there has been "millions lost" because of them.

He challenged Barrett to take the companies over "now. Take the cloud away from this industry (B.C. Tel) and other industries."

"It's quite obvious that the new finance minister does not understand economics," Chabot said.

'SMALL BOY'

McGeer referred to Barrett as "a small boy sent into a big job" and said the premier will have to learn to be more cautious in his public remarks about such things as proposed takeovers of private companies and policies of no-growth.

McGeer said the legislation which has been introduced to the house so far in the session has been "rather trivial" and chastised the government for not dealing properly with the serious problem of unemployment and the creation of new jobs through establishment of an industrial development corporation.

Conservative houseleader Scott Wallace charged in his resonse to the throne speech that statements by Barrett about takeovers "not only create serious unrest in the business community . . . but do tremendous harm to individual investors."

Wallace compared Barrett's statements of party policy with activity in the late 1940s by the B.C. Power Commission in seeking to reduce the price of the Nanaimo-Duncan Utilities Company.

Allende Claims Strikers Failed

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Troops and police kept an uneasy peace between bitterly opposed Chilean political factions today after Marxist President Salvador Allende insisted the country would not be paralysed by a week-long protest stoppage by employers.

Allende said in a radio broadcast that despite the widely publicized stoppages by truck owners and other businessmen, "more than three million Chileans are still working for their country."

They had "overcome the Fascist conspiracy," he said, and "the country has not been and will not be paralysed."

Three million inhabitants in Santiago, the capital, went to bed early for the second successive night of a midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew.

The province of Valparaiso, which includes the country's major port, also was under curfew and tension was high there following the death Wednesday of a man shot by a navy patrol when he failed to respond to their order to halt.

This was the second confirmed death since the crisis erupted on Wednesday last week, when truck owners and owner-drivers all over the country began what was to be a 24-hour strike. It was in protest against a government plan to set up a state-run transport system in the far south.

The government moved toward compromise Wednesday by promising that strikers' leaders would not be prosecuted, requisitioned trucks would be handed back to their owners and the business of transporting people and cargo would remain in the hands of private enterprise.

But the move brought no immediate reaction from the strikers, who are supported by Chile's main opposition party, the Christian Democrats.

Fog persisted over most of the south coast during the night. Visibility in low-lying areas remained near zero. Considerable improvement occurred over Northern Vancouver Island, however, in advance of a weak Pacific cold front moving down the north coast. Cloudiness from this system will reach the southern mainland this evening. This cloud shield will reduce the threat of fog over the inner south coast overnight and Friday.

NAPALM BURNS SEAR BONES, ORGANS: UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A United Nations report says napalm not only burns through the skin but sometimes reaches muscles, bones and even internal organs causing injuries so severe that doctors established new categories to describe burns by the jellied gasoline.

The 52-page report released this week deals with the effects of the deadly firebombs in a factual and nonpolitical manner. It does not accuse anyone of using napalm but presents all known facts about it and recommends it be banned.

Napalm has been used extensively by the United States in Indochina.

Splattered as flaming jellied gasoline upon an enemy, it causes burns beyond the conventional "third degree' used by the medical profession to define maximum injury caused by heat, the report said.

"In the process of triage (listing burn victims by severity) of such burns," says the report, "doctors have established the special category of fourth-degree and even fifth-degree burns.

"These relate to burns that completely char the skin and extend into the deep tissue of the body, damaging the musculature and reaching to the bones and internal organs."

The report, titled "napalm and other incendiary weapons and all aspects of their possible use," was prepared by a seven-member group of government experts in co-operation with the World Health Organization (WHO) and the International Committee of the Red Cross at the request of the UN general assembly.

The group composed of representatives from Nigeria, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the Soviet Union, Peru and Mexico recommended measures be taken "for the prohibition for the use, production, development and stockpiling of napalm and other incendiary weapons."

"Napalm may burn, asphyxiate or poison its victims," the report says. "Its adhesiveness, high burning temperature and prolonged burning time lead to deep burns." The principal characteristic of napalm burns, it noted, "is their combination of depth and multiplicity. In the manner in which the agent is commonly employed, it is scattered over its target in large gobbets.

"This means that people occupying the target area . . . are likely to be hit by a substantial mass of it. Moreover, what also tends to happen is that when they try to remove the napalm from their skin or strip off their burning clothes, they spread it over other parts of their bodies, particularly their hands."

Balmy Years Are Almost Over

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

And the normal, according to one of Canada's leading climatologists, is noticeably worse than what Canadians have been experiencing between 1930 and 1960.

It's more like the climate the continent suffered through in the late 1800s, Dr. Kenneth Hare, climatologist and policy advisor in the federal environment department, said in a recent interview.

A century ago, temperatures were cooler on the west coast and in the eastern half of the continent, scientific studies indicate. And the precipitation was generally higher.

What this all means is that Canadians across the country can expect more frequent severe winters like the ones that broke records in recent years, cooler temperatures, and more of that frigid Arctic air dominating the country's weather during the cooler months.

Two findings designed to cheer up any Canadian: of the past 2,000 years, the period between 1600 and 1900 has been the most glacial — and we're heading back into it again; the so-called normal period between 1930 and 1960 was the most abnormal period in the last 1,000 years.

But climate isn't the only thing that seems to be regressing.

The Arctic pack ice is growing thicker, Dr. Hare reported. And the outflow of pack ice from the Arctic past Greenland into the Labrador Sea and into the Denmark Strait between Greenland and Iceland has increased considerably in recent years.

Scientists think the ice conditions and climate are closely linked in the Arctic. But they say it is next to impossible to say which causes which. It's most likely a complex interaction.

But one thing is known. What happens in the Arctic has drastic effects on the short-term weather and the long-term climate of North America, even on the west coast, where Pacific effects tend to dominate.

On the west coast, the westerlies which flow off the Pacific Ocean tend to have the most effect on weather. In recent years, as a result of a slight but important warming in the Pacific Ocean, the westerlies have been displaced slightly north.

And this has led to the more severe winters Vancouver Island and the mainland of B.C. have been experiencing in recent years, along with eastern Canada.

A-G to View Tennis Match Despite S. Africa Issue

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today he plans to attend the closing ceremonies in Vancouver Sunday of the Rathman's International Tennis Tournament, despite the fact two South African athletes are competing.

Macdonald said he was asked six weeks ago by a personal friend, Jim Skelton of Vancouver, to present the awards at the end of the tournament and agreed at that time.

Earlier this week, NDP backbencher Emery Barnes (Vancouver Centre) refused to attend the opening ceremonies of the tournament because he objected to the presence of the two South Africans. Barnes' specific objection was with the apartheid policy maintained by the government of South Africa.

"I fully support Emery Barnes' indignation against the legislative racial oppression in South Africa and accept his complete sincerity," Macdonald said.

"On the other hand, I do not consider that the South African players were representing their government or its policies."

Macdonald said he has had a "good friendly talk" with Barnes about the matter and added that it is a matter of individual conscience.

Also earlier in the week, members of the Social Credit caucus, notably Pat Jordan (SC—Okanagan North), criticized Premier Barrett for not apologizing for Barnes' actions.

Barrett defended Barnes fully and said he would have done the same thing under the circumstances.

. . . BILINGUALISM

sidering the salaries and expenses of the language instructors and their 'flunking students', the report says. No figures are given for drop-outs in the past two years.

In the 1966-71 period, 22,807 unilingual civil servants enrolled in the language schools, but only 1,851 completed the three or four "Course Levels" necessary to qualify as bilingual. The vast majority gave up on their second language training after going through one or two 'levels'. The cost of training one bilingual employee worked out to $29,000.

The heavily publicized program to create 'French-speaking units' has affected only 564 civil servants in the national capital region.

The French-speaking units in the Quebec region are losing their meaning because more and more jobs are being classified as bilingual.

The study was carried out by a task force of civil servants and outside consultants, headed by Pierre Coulombe, director of bilingualism in the personnel branch of the treasury board.

The cabinet ordered the study in the spring of 1971, after entrusting C. M. Drury, president of the board, with over-all responsibility for promoting bilingualism among the 200,000 federal public servants.

Of the 17 volumes of the report, 13 were written only in French and two only in English. The last two volumes have undergone revisions and are being completed in both languages.

The task-force recommendations include many tough, new proposals to expand the use of French and to give 'bilingualism advisers' broader powers.

The bilingual programs already have generated emotional debates in the campaign for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Trudeau has told his Quebec audiences that his government has sharply increased the influence of French Canadians in federal decision making. He says Francophones waited 100 years before they could deal with their government in their own language. He accuses opposition parties of exploiting an 'Anti-French backlash.'

Progressive Conservatives have accused the government of preventing thousands of English-speaking civil servants from getting deserved promotions by imposing unfair bilingual guidelines.

Claude Wagner, leading the Conservative campaign in Quebec, charges that the Liberals are conducting a "racist, French-power campaign" in the province and anti-Quebec campaign in the rest of the country.

The treasury board task force reported that Drury's "bilingual goals for 1975," which have spread fear among public servants who speak only English, will not be achieved if the existing trends continue.

The report says 'urgent action' is needed to reverse these trends.

Communist Vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Gus Hall, U.S. Communist Party candidate for president, called both President Nixon and Senator George McGovern warmongers and tools of big business Monday night and urged voters to give him "the vote of protest." In a paid political announcement, Hall called for votes for him and his vice-presidential running mate, Jarvis Tyner.

HIDDEN PUNCH ON BEAT

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The advantage of a new billy club demonstrated at a police chiefs' conference is that the policeman can jab and chop with it and still avoid "open shots from our friendly photographer," said the advertising brochure.

The black plastic billy club called the "prosecutor" is among hundreds of gimmicks, gadgets and computer-age weaponry designed for police work and shown at the 79th international chiefs of police conference. Police chiefs from 25 nations are attending the week-long conference now under way.

It is designed to protect an officer from "the popular police brutality charge," says the brochure describing the club.

The club has a short handle fixed at a right angle, allowing the officer to conceal it along the length of his arm. From this position, the brochure says, "jabs, chops, blocks and many other techniques may be used . . . with tremendous effectiveness without open shots from our friendly photographer."

The Brass Tacks

Organized labor's joy over the removal of British Columbia's mediation commission and amendment of the act under which it was authorized may be tempered a little after the details of the new NDP law have been studied. The new provisions confer sweeping powers on the minister, permitting him "to do such things as he considers necessary to maintain or secure industrial peace."

That power might be acceptable to labor while it is in the hands of the NDP — but presumably the legislation will still be on the books when the socialist party in time makes way for a non-socialist government.

The previous Social Credit act, of course, ran head-on into labor's aversion to compulsory and binding arbitration of industrial disputes. The government's firmness in passing the act was not extended to implementation of the measure, with the result that the law was in effect stalemated. But in being relieved of that provision, organized labor will now be subject to such ministerial powers as the right to enter premises without a search warrant to enquire into any matter affecting industrial peace, labor-management agreements, industrial research and other fields; and to be almost without restrictions in getting such information.

The minister can order information to be kept from the public where he believes this to be harmful, and there are other provisions keeping secret any facts gathered by the department's staff. And the minister may act as the final arbiter in disputes.

These are not powers to be dismissed lightly. The question arises: if the Social Credit government had brought in the new bill with these provisions, would labor not have raised a cry of discrimination and imposition? The mediation commission has been eradicated at a cost yet to be made clear.

There can be little question that some of the NDP legislation reaches far for authority. The legislation regarding tobacco and liquor advertising, for instance, while restoring the right to publish such material, includes wide powers in regard to packaging, sales, promotion and other aspects of the tobacco trade.

Social Credit legislation frequently was loose and difficult to implement without numerous bolstering amendments. The NDP laws appear to give the government powers which may or may not be put into use. But they will be on the books, as some who cheer today may learn tomorrow.

Strings on the Satellites?

As recent events have emphasized, orbiting space satellites make television broadcasts between continents feasible. Further technological advances may render transmission by satellite directly into home receivers — without benefit of ground transmission — practicable. It is possible now, but prohibitively expensive.

In idealistic terms, this could bring the human family closer together on an almost people-to-people basis. Ideologically, on the other hand, it could submerge the cultures of lesser developed nations under the weight of technology and wealth enjoyed only by their more advanced fellow-tenants of the globe. Moreover, it could, unrestricted, beam propaganda from the capable countries directly into other nations to the detriment of nationalistic factions in the receiving countries.

Hence the current move, sponsored by Russia, to establish control over satellite broadcasts beamed into private homes anywhere on earth. On the basis that Russia not only controls its news, but manipulates it for political purposes — a charge levelled domestically by some elements of the United States against Washington also — unrestricted use of the satellites could be highly injurious to some national interests, without representing the ideal of the free flow of news and information.

The possibility of restricted satellite use is not immediate, either along lines suggested by the Soviets or on the somewhat more liberal lines suggested by UNESCO and supported by the Third World nations.

The freedom of information issue is thus raised again in perplexing form. Britain's wartime BBC evaded the checks foreign nations tried to place upon it with transmissions to European listeners, and the free world applauded. Technical restrictions, in that instance, did not work. Nor were they successful against the Voice of America and — without free world applause or effective persuasion — against Axis Sally, Lord Haw Haw and Tokyo Rose.

Their Own People

Familiar names emerge in the British Columbia government approach to a program aimed at giving Indians a larger share in conducting their own affairs. Frank Calder, the first Indian elected to the Legislature and a stalwart champion of his people, has acquired as his executive assistant Reg Kelly, who has served in significant posts in both federal and provincial fields. They have numerous advantages as they begin their 12-month survey to seek means of removing obstacles to Indian advancement. They have established reputations in the field. They are both members of the peoples whom they seek to help, and they both have had extensive experience in the operations of Canadian and British Columbian native affairs.

This does not automatically guarantee avoidance of conflict. Individuality among Indians is probably as pronounced as it is among any other ethnic group. Certainly there are political differences among them, both of a partisan nature and in the more obscure area of band activities. But at least the minister and his executive assistant will not be charged with failure to understand Indians from the Indian point of view — frequently a source of major difficulty in relationships between a non-Indian agency and its clients.

Separatists in the Doldrums

Having established itself so dramatically as an important force in Quebec politics by attracting 23 per cent of the popular vote in the 1970 provincial general election, the PQ has apparently reached a saturation point in winning new support.

The separatist party must now chart a strategy which will broaden the base of its following before the next Quebec election, expected in 1974. If Rene Levesque and his followers don't succeed, the PQ may be relegated for years to come — if not permanently — to its current role as a protest party without a hand on the reins of power.

A failure to win significant new support would result in a serious loss of momentum — the enthusiasm and high expectations which have helped the Pequistes maintain their high profile in Quebec's political affairs since 1970.

The critical challenge faced by the party was pointed up last week by the results of two provincial byelections. The Liberals of Premier Robert Bourassa retained both seats and the PQ failed to gain more than a token increase in its share of the popular vote, despite strong hopes that it would capture the riding of Duplessis.

Misjudged Climate

The largest city in the constituency is Sept-Iles, the isolated boom town on the north coast of the Gulf of St. Lawrence which was sealed off by union militants during May's "Common Front" labor crisis. The Pequistes felt the climate in the community was right for a separatist victory, indeed, they were so confident that Rene Levesque — without a seat since 1970 — seriously considered running there himself.

However, the election result shows how badly the party miscalculated its own strength. Not only did the Liberals win the seat, with some 13,500 votes over less than 7,000 for the PQ, but the party gained only a slight increase over its percentage of the vote in 1970.

It was the same story — with one surprising difference — in Gatineau riding, across the Ottawa River from the national capital.

As expected, the Liberals won handily. However, the PQ again failed to achieve more than a slight increase in its share of the vote and, most surprisingly of all, finished in third place. The second choice of Gatineau's residents was still Unite-Quebec, the former Union Nationale party which has been widely reported to be edging over the brink of political oblivion since it lost power to the Liberals in 1970. Unite-Quebec had run no candidate in Duplessis riding.

The voting in both constituencies showed that there has been clearly no significant change in the political sentiments of Quebecers since the provincial general election two years ago. Premier Bourassa retains the support of a large majority of voters — despite his administration's fragile appearance.

To alter this situation, Mr. Levesque will have to persuade his party to adopt an even more moderate — his more radical followers would call it watered down — stance. This has been happening steadily since 1970, on the issue of minority language rights and in neutralizing the PQ's radical socialists. However, it may be much more difficult to gain further concessions.

Liberal Wing

Robert Burns, one of the seven Pequiste deputies in the 108-seat National Assembly, charged last fall that his party had become merely the more progressive wing of the Liberals. That was because the PQ had decided against official participation in a protest over the shutdown of the newspaper La Presse during a labor dispute.

Mr. Burns was joined in his dissent by numerous riding associations of the PQ and Mr. Levesque was faced with several tense weeks of fence mending.

A further watering down of PQ policies, while it might attract significant new support, could also cause a split with the left-wing thinkers who form the backbone of the movement.

The Parti Quebecois is many different things to different people — and not the monolithic separatist threat which many people outside Quebec assume it to be. Its supporters include separatists with both conservative and radical social and economic beliefs, and undoubtedly many people who are not separatists at all but merely wish to register protest votes.

The challenge faced by Rene Levesque is to maintain this broad coalition — while somehow managing to broaden the PQ's appeal even further.

JAMES RESTON

Flaws in the Nixon Paradoxes

ATLANTA — President Nixon is speaking these days with a new quiet confidence — even with a kind of philosophical elder statesman's calm — but there is a catch.

He looked and sounded almost schoolmasterish in Atlanta, but somehow he never quite gets his words and his actions together.

Here in this remarkably progressive Southern city, he made an eloquent appeal for moral virtues, religious ethics, integrity and justice but also for his Vietnam policy, his anti-busing policy and his economic policies, as if all these policies supported all these heroic ideals.

There was not a single policy dear to the heart of the South that Nixon did not emphasize in Atlanta, from anti-busing to his Supreme Court appointees, and he mentioned them all in the name of national unity and peace.

It was a masterful union of politics and theology, sort of a new Machiavelli's political manual in the binding of a hymn book. And the remarkable thing about it is that he really seemed to believe all this with the utmost sincerity.

Persistent Puzzle

This has always been the puzzle about Richard Nixon. He does the day's assignment well, but there are no connecting rods between one day and the other.

If the day's assignment is to appeal to the religious and social traditions of the south, he talks of moral virtues and character.

But if the question is the Watergate burglary, or the hidden sources of Republican campaign funds, or the controversies over the I.T.T., the Soviet grain deal, or the mysterious rise in the milk support price, somehow the guiding moral virtues are overlooked or overcome.

In Atlanta, he extols personal ethics and trust in government as indispensable to the grandeur of the nation, but around the Watergate and the Republican national committee, they are a nuisance if not intolerable.

In Atlanta, he celebrates the religious life as the foundation of our moral security, but in Vietnam the religious concept of pity and the sanctity of every human life are regarded as a menace to our military security and national pride.

The point of this paradox is not that this combination of noble concepts and dirty tricks is failing, but that it is likely to win for Nixon in the short run and defeat him and his principles in the long run.

RICHARD NIXON

For the emerging question now in this campaign is not whether Nixon can win but whether, considering his policies and his tactics, he can really restore enough confidence and unity to govern effectively from 1973 to 1977.

He seems to be increasingly conscious of this larger objective as the campaign goes on. He was back again in Atlanta on his theme of bringing us together, and creating a "new majority" — but his assumption is that he can do this with words because his ends are good and will justify any means.

As a working strategy for the campaign, this may very well work, but as a strategy for unifying and governing the nation, it probably will not last.

For he may win by appealing to the fears of the comfortable majority against the militant blacks, the liberated women, and the student demonstrators, but come next year he will be left with the war, and the poor, and a frustrated and angry minority he has overwhelmed but not convinced.

Angry Congress

Also, Nixon will probably have to deal next year with a frustrated and angry Democratic majority in the Congress, even if he defeats McGovern by a landslide, and this will not be easy.

For while the Democrats in the Congress admire his political skill, and are almost ready to concede their defeat, most of them — and this also goes for his Republican colleagues from Javits on the left to Buckley on the right — don't know which Nixon they're supposed to be following.

Watching the President avoid moral issues in Washington lately and celebrating them in Atlanta —— and not seeing the drop of poison in between — one has the impression that he has won the election and doesn't know it, and yet is so determined to win at any cost that he won't be able to get the unity he wants and needs to govern in his "four more years."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Real Issues

Some commentators are saying this 1972 election is phony and without issues. The truth is, this election could well be the most important in our history, past or future. The trouble is that instead of politicians explaining their views on real issues, they are being manoeuvred into wasting time on gabby hotline shows.

There are many issues, and they are so vital, deep, and portentous as to make serious people quake with fear. Neither these grave issues nor their proposed solutions will be here today and hopefully gone tomorrow. We all know that all too often a medical "cure" is much worse than the disease, and besides, we often end up suffering the agonies of both disease and cure for the rest of our life.

Some sober and consequential issues in this election (for your contemplation) are: (1) bilingualism and deliberate changing of the Canadian identity and history; (2) unemployment and the work ethic; (3) foreign policy and aid; (4) democratic freedoms vs socialism; (5) growing government bureaucracy and expenditure; (6) growing crime and immorality; (7) control of education and communications.

These are some of the most critical issues before us, and their handling stands to make or break Canada and Canadians as we know it and them. Make no mistake, these are the issues the elected government will immediately act on to suit themselves — they haven't had to say what, why, or how, because the political hotline shows expose only personal beefs instead of issues, and the candidates solemnly take notice of the outbursts and questions just to mold their image appropriately for the vote October 30. After the election, they will immediately start on the bilingualism, etc. (Did you seriously believe they would spend their time on abortion and noise pollution as on the hotline?)

Actually, the hotline is a threat to democracy, for as a result, we do not know what the politicians intend to do about any of the pressing issues; even if they wanted to explain their platforms, they wouldn't and couldn't be allowed the time. Canadians should do their own thinking on these matters as of now, and not live to bitterly regret their vote about October 30. — N. Horne, Edmonton, Alberta.

Blame

Mr. W. A. C. Bennett has not lost any time in revealing, in part at least, his prospective tactics as leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. He knows full well, as we all know, that we are in for a bad bout of unemployment this winter, which is a common phenomenon that periodically and inevitably plagues our capitalist economy. Mr. Bennett, however, will persistently lay the blame for it at the door of the bad socialists, and thousands of his political followers — to say nothing of Mr. Gaglardi's retinue — will swallow that, line, hook and sinker.

Trust Mr. Bennett not to miss a political trick. Somebody has to call his bluff. —C. K. Morison, 2220 Windsor Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 19, 1912:

The attendance at the three days' exhibition of the Island Arts and Crafts Club, which opened Thursday at the Alexandra Club, shows that the people of Victoria are taking an unusual interest in the work of its artists and craftsmen, and that the love of the aesthetic and beautiful is not so utterly dead in the far west as sceptics would have one believe.

Last evening there was a constant procession of people passing from picture to picture, many critical, all appreciative of the character of the effort put forth by local talent represented in the various paintings.

We Can't Afford Private Land

By JOHN F. DONNELLY

(Donnelly is a freelance writer living in Burlington, Ont. He wrote this article for the Toronto Star.)

Our system of private ownership of land would shock an intelligent visitor from another planet. There is no possible way, in our kind of economic system, or any other, that the individual ownership of land can be justified.

The problem is that we have always treated land as a commodity like any other. We buy and sell it as if it were a bushel of wheat, an automobile, or a painting. Do the dissimilarities escape us?

Are we blind to the fact that there is no comparison at all? Or do we simply cling tenaciously to a custom which began a long time ago and which caters to the streak of larceny in all of us?

Perhaps we all hope for the chance to make the same kind of speculative "killings" that are made so often by the gambling element of the business world.

The truth of the matter, if we are willing to face it, is that the private ownership of land has had a disastrous effect on society. In addition, if it is allowed to continue, there is every possibility that it will strangle the world economy. For, unlike other commodities, the supply cannot be increased. It is limited in amount. The land surface of the world consists of about 64 million square miles.

Never Increases

Unless you consider small additions by coastal landfills or reclamations, and occasional volcanic action creating tiny islands in the oceans, that quantity will never increase. Demand will therefore keep raising the price.

Unlike other commodities, land cannot be transported or significantly altered, except within the relatively narrow confines of land clearing and improvement. It remains there as it has since the formation of the world, inert, unyielding, changed only imperceptibly by the winds and the rains and the erosion of millions of years.

Man has little or no effect on it, other than possibly the clearing of trees, irrigation, and the changing of contours of small sections. He buys it, builds on it or farms it, uses it for a given number of years and then either abandons it or sells it to someone for another use.

Normally, under the long-term trend of increasing demand, the price will have risen from the time he first bought it. But has he really done anything to increase its real value? Has he added anything to it? Normally not. Indeed, the chances are that his farming will have exhausted it.

Under private ownership the value of a parcel of land is determined by its possible uses. Thus, for example, a tract of land above an important mineral deposit will command the highest prices, sometimes going to many thousands of dollars an acre.

Desperate Need

The expectation of the person or corporation willing to pay that price is that it will yield a value of minerals far in excess of the cost. In the same way, other parcels of land in fertile agricultural areas will be in strong demand for the value of the crops they can produce.

In other areas, land will be in demand for housing, industry, public works, transportation, recreation. The price of the land will be determined by what the prospective buyers are willing to pay. If this were not so, the land would remain unsold and unused.

But why should this be the case? Because we need land desperately in the centre of an urban area for housing, or for a home for the aged, or for a school or a hospital, does that mean that the owner of that land should hold out until we have, in desperation, paid far more than we can possibly afford? Should the high cost of land thus obtained rule out its use in the best interests of the community, or should it put the end costs of the services thus provided beyond the reach of so many?

Let's be honest about it! Too much land is bought and sold with only speculation in mind. We have instances of land increasing in price within the space of three or four years by 1,000 per cent. Why?

We are all familiar with land deals. This is not fiction. Land deals are occuring all the time. One has only to examine the legal records of almost any municipality to find that land deals have been the source of much of the corruption at all levels of political activity. One small leak of information on the planned use for land is enough to make fortunes for several people. And it happens. The records speak for themselves.

If the buying and selling of land were only an innocuous game played by a few, there would be no complaint. The gamblers could win or lose among themselves and no one else would be affected by their chance-taking. But in actual fact we all lose. In every possible way. The high price of land has an immediate impact on everything we buy.

Sacred Cow

The housing shortage of the world is in a large measure brought about by the high cost of land. One-third and more of the total cost of a new house in many areas is caused by the price of the land. Hospitals and institutions and schools are priced exorbitantly by the high cost of the land on which they are built.

What is the alternative? The sacred cow of private property must be destroyed where land is concerned. But already you can hear the cry of protest from the fellow with the lakefront cottage, or the farmer who has lived a lifetime on his land, or the city dweller with a house in the suburbs and many others. They all have a deeply rooted emotional or financial attachment to "their" piece of land.

Would they really understand that you wouldn't be taking anything away from them by eliminating private ownership of the land? It is only the method of payment that would be changed. And it would be to the benefit of themselves as well as to the whole community.

Bidding System

Land can only be "owned" by all of us collectively, whatever you call the method. In practical terms, this means that title would be held by the state, or by the government. Instead of owning it, the user would simply pay a stipulated rent. The rent would go on as long as the land was used by that person and when he no longer had use for it, it would revert to the state again until the next occupant came along to pay the required rent.

Under this kind of system, it is inevitable that problems will arise. How do you fix the value, or the rent, on a parcel of land? Would the rent of a muskeg swamp in northern Ontario be the same as that of a choice residential property at the corner of Queen and Yonge in Toronto?

If it were, what would happen if you had a number of prospective users wanting the same piece of land at the same time? Under private ownership the price would be bid higher and higher until, theoretically at least, only one possible buyer was left. But under a system of government ownership of the land, who would decide on the tenant?

The answer could be in a system of bidding. But the bidding would be for the amount of rent, not for total cost. The state would then lease or rent the land to the highest bidder.

Granted, this would increase the cost of using the land to the person who buys, but it would be an economic increase, not an empty, inflated increase. The land would simply have more value for one kind of use than another, and if we are to retain freedom of choice in our economic world, that is the way it should go.

Some communities are already smart enough to realize that the endless rounds of speculative increase in the price of land have all but ruined any chance to improve their living space.

As a result, many cities and towns, especially in their critical core properties, have bought the land and will not sell it. It is leased only, usually with a long term lease to protect the user for the lifetime of his enterprise. This enables the community to plan, to eliminate urban blight, revitalize the city or town.

If is a beginning, but it hasn't gone far enough. The same kind of problem exists right across the country. No one should own land. He has no right to. It belongs to all of us. He should be able to use it for as long as he wants to, and for virtually whatever purpose he wants, but he should not be able to sell it at a profit.

Why Delay?

The question then arises: What do you do about all the land currently owned? In good faith, people paid out money for the land they now use for housing, farming, commercial enterprises. To them, it is money in the bank. Can you take it away from them?

Certainly not! They would obviously have to be paid for it. Then there arises the problem of determining market values and how the state would pay the enormous cost of buying up all the private land in existence.

Obviously no government could do this. But it could fix the rent of the land and then let the user remain rent-free until his accumulated rent credits equalled the market price. If the property changed hands before that time, then any prepaid rent would become a charge on the new occupant. Or, if possible at that stage, the state could pay off the remainder of the purchase price.

The point is that this will have to be done eventually. Why postpone the agony? We cannot continue with the private ownership of land as it is now. Speculation will kill us.

If we want to use a parcel of land we must be prepared to pay a predetermined rent for it as long as we use it, not an artificially inflated price for the doubtful privilege of selling it later to someone else at many times its original cost.

Or do we really have the courage to tackle the problem?

It's So Solemn in Sodom

By JOHN CORRY

NEW YORK — The thing about Sodom is that it is so solemn. Here is a girl. She is wearing a grey nightgown, and she is dancing on a stage. She is doing something like a hula, and she is bouncing her hips. There is baby fat on them.

Thirty men watch her. They are distinguished by absolutely nothing, and they could be the 30 men off a subway in Brooklyn. They are, however, enormously polite.

The men are at a live sex show in the Fun City Theatre on west 42nd Street. They had arrived one at a time and they had occupied the front row first, sitting one seat apart until that was no longer possible, and then taking seats on the aisle.

That's the way men go to sex shows and dirty movies in New York. In fact, they have been doing it now for several years. The merchandising of sex, or perhaps of only a fantasy about it, is a growing business, and the shows, the movies and the massage parlors proliferate.

At live sex shows and dirty movies, no one willingly sits next to anyone else. Everyone seems afraid of meeting a pervert, or perhaps of being thought of as one, and only Oriental men, especially the Japanese, are different. They often arrive in groups although they are mostly solemn, too.

So at the Fun City Theatre, the girl is dancing to recorded rock music, and the men are staring. She more or less dances out of the nightgown until she is nude. Frequently, she throws herself to the stage and writhes on it. When she does, the men past the front row lean to one side or another to watch.

When it is over the girl picks up her nightgown and walks down the aisle. Some of the men get up, uncertain whether there is more. The girl walks by, and ever so slightly several men back away from her. No one says a word, although they watch her intently.

In fact, there is more: a dirty movie. Dirty movies are either hard core or soft core. Soft-core movies offer what is called simulated sex, which means they do not truly show a sex act, only the backs of bodies in what is supposed to be a sex act.

The men at the Fun City Theater watched a hard-core movie with a bad sound track. They sat through all of it, even the end, when a narrator said with cheerful sincerity:

"That was Donna, folks, doing a marvellous job in a very difficult part. And that was Frieda, Al, John, Billie and Herb, Tanya and Mark, all doing a wonderful job. Let's give them a big hand for the marvellous job — a great little cast in a great little movie."

★ ★ ★

At the San Francisco Theatre on Broadway 14 men were watching a hard-core movie, it was not about much of anything.

Then, from a closed booth at the back of the theatre, a young woman emerged. The booth had a sign on it, suggesting a body massage for $10. The young women went through the audience, saying to each man:

"Sir, would you care for a massage?"

No one said yes, no one seemed to say much of anything, or even to look at the young woman. Everyone seemed to be having a reverie.

★ ★ ★

Tickets to most dirty movies, which often are followed by live sex shows, cost $3. There are also peep shows, flickering reels of one minute, which cost only 25 cents. They are both soft and hard core, although most are soft.

The king of the peep show business in New York is Martin Hodas, who has a beard and a deep voice.

Hodas was sitting with his associates in an office on 42nd Street, complaining about the way the police were trying to shut down his business. In fact, he was clutching a sheaf of summonses.

"Every day I walk in I don't know if I'm in business or not," Hodas said. "There's no law prohibiting a peep show, and so the cops charge me with anything."

A colleague swept into the office.

"You got to get that ugly pig out of here," he said.

"She's driving everyone away."

"How long has she been here," Hodas asked.

"Just today," the colleague said.

"So get rid of her," Hodas said.

"Now you understand," he was actually saying, "that this will just be a bit part in the movie."

Not all the entrepreneurs in Sodom have problems. Robert Scharaga, for instance, says he has none at all. Scharaga owns a massage parlor that is not any old massage parlor, it is Caesar's Retreat on east 46th Street.

Most massage parlors are tacky, offering not much more than a girl taking several swipes with rubbing alcohol and a nude man who is supine on a table. There is not much style to any of it, and once the few swipes have been taken, the man ordinarily asks the girl to perform a sexual act.

Caesar's Retreat is different. One may spend $20 there for a half-hour massage by one girl, which is Program A. Or $100 for what is supposed to be "100 glorious minutes with a harem of three beautiful, pleasing slave girls," which is Program E.

Or, a customer may take something like one girl from Program A and two from Program B and indulge his own fantasies.

One man, for instance, would rent a room at Caesar's Retreat for a whole day. He would arrive at noon and engage one girl until she was through at 7 p.m., and then another girl until she was through at 2 or 3 a.m. Scharaga would send out for sandwiches.

Scharaga, a stocky man with a beard and a smile, was once a stockbroker at Walston and Co. Wall Street palled on him, however, and Scharaga opened Caesar's Retreat. He is now planning to open another one in midtown, and is thinking of something like a nationwide franchise.

Being a respectable place, Caesar's Retreat is a member of the Better Business Bureau and the East Side Chamber of Commerce.

Other Africa Nations Share Uganda Problem

By WILLIAM RASPBERRY
The Washington Post

It's hard to find an African diplomat in Washington who agrees with President Amin's decision giving Asians three months to get out of Uganda. It's even harder to find one who will disagree publicly.

What is involved is a good deal more than diplomatic reticence. For Gen. Amin has brought to a head — and tragically bungled — a situation that many African nations will have to deal with sooner or later.

Whether it is the Indians and Pakistanis in east Africa or the Syrians and Lebanese in the west, each country seems to have its foreign mercantile population. And in each case there is some degree of resentment.

The chief Ugandan criticism is that the Asians — primarily of Indian and Pakistani descent — have been in, but never of, Uganda. Even those who have taken out Ugandan citizenship have chosen to remain aloof from the African people.

The resulting resentment has been greatly intensified by the fact that the Asians have achieved a good deal of economic success in east Africa, while contributing relatively little to the economic strength of the countries where they live.

Such is the combination of resentment, jealously and sheer hatred, that Amin never doubted massive public support for his ouster edict. (There was substantial student resistance when he extended his original order to include Asian citizens of Uganda as well as those who had opted for Indian, Pakistani or British citizenship; Amin subsequently relented.)

"The three-month part was silly — unconscionable, really," one west African diplomat said, "But to call it simple racism misses the point.

"In a way, you have to say the Asians brought it on themselves by their insistence on remaining apart from the Africans. If only they had lived among Africans, and certainly if they had married African girls, things would have been different. I don't like to say it, but it would have made a big difference if they had even made babies with African girls.

"But their caste system won't permit that, and for social, religious and cultural reasons, they kept to themselves."

There was another reason as well, another diplomat observed.

In the pre-independence days, he said, it must have seemed a bad gamble for the Asians to identify too much with the Africans. It was the British who had the prestige, and while the Asians were clearly a step below the British, they also saw themselves as a step or two above the Africans.

AMIN
. . . bungled

"Now comes independence, and you can see the position the Asians are in," he said.

"But even then they had a choice. But they still refused to identify with the Africans. Even those who took Ugandan citizenship did so for reasons of economics, not patriotism. And besides that, the money they make they send out of the country.

"The western press has been making a big fuss about the number of teachers, doctors, lawyers and other professionals Uganda will lose because of Amin's order. That's true, but most of these were not working for the benefit of Africans in the first place. Only in the last few years, for instance, have Asians been teaching in government schools."

That's by way of background, not support.

For while it is true that Amin's action came in response to a strong feeling among his countrymen, it is equally true that his handling of the situation was a disservice to them.

People often make absurd demands with the understanding that their leaders will be too intelligent to carry them out. "Kill the umpire" is an emotional outburst, not an execution order.

Amin has taken the Ugandan emotion literally. He neither worked for accommodation with the foreign tradesmen, as the Liberians are doing with the Lebanese, nor bought them out at a fair price, as the Ghanaians did with the Syrians.

He's simply taking over their businesses and kicking them out. What is more he's not even pretending to do it selectively, on the basis of specific sins against his regime; he's doing it on the sole basis of ethnic origin.

And if that evokes memories of Hitler, that doesn't bother Amin. He's already expressed sympathy and understanding for that madman and his slaughter of 6 million Jews.

Assured Beach Access Sought Through World College Land

The federal government is expected to be asked by the Capital Regional District to preserve the public ownership and foreshore access of a 74-acre property at Mary Hill on Pedder Bay which the United World College School of the Pacific is planning to buy.

The move was agreed to Wednesday in a close vote by the parks committee of the district. This will go to the regional board Oct. 28 as a recommendation.

Committee members agreed that the federal government, which owns the land through the defence department, should not sell the 74 acres to the college but lease it for 99 years or while it is operating as a college.

The close vote came on a proposal that the lease exclude a 200 or 100-foot strip along the 3,000 feet of waterfront, which would remain in crown ownership and available to the college and the public, but not to be used for building sites and left in its natural state.

Langford director Earl Pallister said "this is an educational institute you are trying to legislate out."

But Central Saanich Ald. Percy Lazard said public waterfront land should not be sold to private interests, or it is gone forever.

Other directors said the college is to be marine-oriented, including provision of a public life-saving station.

A vote to simply ask the federal government to allow the public access to the foreshore "where possible" was defeated 16 to 12. The recommendation including the public green strip was then passed 17 to 11.

In addition, the committee agreed that a letter should be sent to the federal government requesting that in future the district be given "the courtesy of notification" of disposal of federal lands in the area.

In a report to the committee, planning director Tony Roberts said an inquiry of the national defence department indicates the college will be sold 74 acres on the north side of Pedder Inlet, in Metchosin, including 3,000 feet of waterfront.

"The board has no regional park or other proposals for this land but there have been strong expressions of public opinion and statements from all levels of government that public waterfront land should not be aliented by sale to private interests," he said.

"Inquiries indicate that the land is being handed over to the Crown Disposal Corporation for sale. Transfer would seem to be imminent."

Roberts said there is no immediate pressure for public use of the waterfront but a break of 3,000 feet in public ownership would be "an undesirable feature restricting recreational opportunity and disturbing an unspoiled waterfront environment."

He said his recommendations, which were endorsed by the committee, would "protect the future public interest without seriously impeding the present plans of the World College."

Bear Attacks Tot

GIFU, Japan (AP) — A bear fractured the skull of a six-year-old girl Tuesday when it attacked her nursery class during an outing on a mountain in central Japan, police said. A nurse accompanying the 25 children was injured when she tried to free the child. The bear ran off.

OTTAWA AID SOUGHT TO RUN RECYCLING

The Capital Regional District will apply to Canada Manpower for a local initiatives grant to continue the Borden Avenue recycling depot until May 31 and to assist in a feasibility study of recycling.

If approved, the grant will cover the region's share of costs of continuing the operation from Dec. 1 to May 31.

The district's public works committee agreed Wednesday that $3,000 should be authorized from its resources for the study.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who purchased a stolen bicycle, painted it and changed many of the parts, was sentenced to nine months in prison by Judge F. S. Green in provincial court Wednesday.

Mark Graham Murray, 23, of 1621 Fernwood, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property under $200.

Prosecutor John Macintyre told the court that Murray bought the bicycle from another man for $60. The retail value was $325.

Police went to Murray's home Aug. 20 after receiving information concerning the bicycle from a sporting goods shop where he had taken it for repairs.

Macintyre said Murray's previous record included six months for breaking and entering and theft in October, 1971, nine months for possession of stolen property and possession of a narcotic in September, 1969, and a $350 fine for theft under $50 in May, 1969.

"Your record certainly doesn't speak well for you, Mr. Murray," said Green, "under the circumstances I think I have no alternative but to sentence you to a term of imprisonment."

★ ★ ★

The judge said he would have imposed a sentence of more than five months for Terry A. Mullaney, 22, of 23 - 2503 Blanshard, if alcohol had not been involved in his crimes.

Mullaney was convicted of breaking and entering and theft Oct. 4 and he pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and breach of probation Wednesday.

Macintyre said the accused had been drinking at a local beer parlor and as he was leaving he stole a brief case from a car in the parking lot.

A Victoria police constable testified that Mullaney later broke into S.J. Willis School, stole several small items and put them in the brief case.

The constable said the man had been drinking, but in his opinion was not drunk.

Defence counsel Douglas Macfarlane said Mullaney had been drinking for seven hours prior to the incident.

"The accused was so drunk that he could not form the intent to commit this offence," said Macfarlane.

Green said Mullaney wasn't even drunk, in the opinion of a constable with five years experience in police work, and found the accused guilty of the breaking and entering and theft charge.

The other two charges were remanded to Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to both.

Mullaney was placed on probation May 10 for a similar charge and the breach of probation arose from the breaking and entering and theft conviction.

"I find myself here, dealing with a young man, who in May of this year, was before the courts on a similar offence," said Green, "it's obvious that alcohol has played some part in this offence."

He was sentenced to five months on the breaking and entering and theft charge, given a five-month concurrent sentence on the theft under $200 charge, and a two-month concurrent sentence on the breach of probation charge.

Ross William McTavish, 21, of 732 Meaford, was fined $350 and given a six-month probationary term for theft over $200.

Macintyre told the court McTavish purchased some stereo equipment from D. S. Young Ltd., 794 Fort, and as he was leaving the store picked up a casette tape recorder, worth $380, and put it in a suitcase.

McTavish told police he did it "to see if it could be done," said Macintyre.

Two 38-year-old men, Harold James Gropp, of 3110 Wishart, and Kenneth Jerome Pierson, of 3299 Galloway, were each fined a total of $550 in provincial traffic court Wednesday by Judge Harold Alder.

Both men were fined $350 each for impaired driving and a further $200 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

Regiments Will Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department said Tuesday there are no plans to abolish traditional regimental names, badges and headgear in the Canadian Armed Forces in favor of uniform military designations and dress.

A department spokesman was responding to a letter circulated by the Governor-General's Horse Guards, an armed forces reserve regiment, charging that "military authorities in Ottawa" planned to abolish distinguishing titles and dress "in a short number of months."

Special Meeting Set On Regional Land Use

Regional board directors wrestled with a report on five alternatives on residential land use for an hour Wednesday, before agreeing the subject needed a special meeting in early November.

The alternatives, ranging from continuing present policies to directing growth to various areas and to creation of two new towns in Central Saanich and Colwood, sparked some reaction.

Central Saanich Ald. Percy Lazarz said there is "no way we want a major city in our area, and we are letting you know this."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, chairman of regional planning committee, said it is "ludicrous" for directors to discuss the alternatives as members of municipalities. It should be discussed regionally, although he agreed with Lazarz about the new town.

Lazarz said his municipality's planning is in "context" with regionalism.

"You are all in favor of regionalism but you wouldn't want your daughter to marry one," joked Pollen.

Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell proposed that agricultural land remain as such "notwithstanding the pressures of the market place" but he later withdrew his motion.

He said the board members must state specific goals before going into the alternatives. But other board members wanted the goals to be general.

REGIONAL DISTRICT TO STUDY GARBAGE

Draft letters patent for the Capital Regional District to take on the function of garbage disposal will be considered at the board's Oct. 28 meeting.

This was agreed to Wednesday by public works committee, after hearing a report on the subject, discussed off and on for the last four years.

It was also agreed that a study should be undertaken of methods of disposal and sites available.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said this means the private contractor can state his price and "there is nowhere else to put it." He foresaw having more dumps because it didn't make sense to haul refuse from Port Renfrew to the Highlands, for example.

'Back-Door' Immigrants Delayed

TORONTO (CP) — Immigration officials took 121 visitors from Ecuador and Haita off a Montreal-bound flight at Toronto International Airport Tuesday night.

The visitors had their passports siezed in what officers described as a "work-to-rule" protest against working conditions in handling a flood of "immigrants" coming in the back door.

Immigration officers said they didn't have enough Spanish and French-speaking interpreters on duty to handle the non-English-speaking visitors who spent the night sleeping on benches or the lounge floor at the airport.

They were expected to be processed through to Montreal today.

An airport official estimated that 1,000 "visitors" a day pass through Toronto airport, most of them with the real objective of applying for landed-immigrant status.

"The dam has burst and they're pouring through here by the thousands," he said. "They're coming now more than ever before because word got around that thousands who came illegally before them had been forgiven."

The spokesman said the immigration officials feel their job has become a farce.

"It was sort of a work-to-rule protest," he said. "Last night they just became fed up with the whole situation."

WONDERING?

HOW, REALLY, DO THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVES DIFFER FROM THE OTHER PARTIES?

THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY:

- believes STRONGLY in the incentive system.
- believes STRONGLY that a person who works and is thrifty should be able to enjoy the fruits of his labour.
- believes STRONGLY in capable management in government motivated with a social conscience.
- is in no way a socialist or socialistic party.
- believes STRONGLY that Parliament must be supreme in Canadian affairs.

There is clear proof, past and present, that the other parties ARE DIFFERENT from the above.

Liquidation: Hanoi's Persistent Fear

By VICTOR ZORZA
Special to The Times

This is the third of four articles on the possibility of peace in Vietnam by international affairs expert Victor Zorza on the Manchester Guardian.

Those Hanoi leaders who want to concentrate on the "building of socialism" in the north, that is, on industrialization, would be far more vulnerable to the political effects of bombing than those who care primarily about a victory in the south. The evidence of the debate between the two factions over the years shows that it is the "builders" who were usually pressing for concessions to the United States to procure a suspension of the bombing, while the "fighters" wanted to go on regardless.

A major issue in this debate, which is again becoming visible, has been the fear that by bombing the north the United States might not just hold back the "building of socialism" but "liquidate" its socialist system as such, that is, overthrow Communist rule there.

Just how this end might be achieved, unimaginable as it may appear to most people in the west, was indicated in the earlier stages of the debate. The United States was said to intend the liquidation of the "socialist system" in the north by planning ultimately to unleash the southern generals against Hanoi. Why the north should fear any threat, even it it were seriously intended, when President Thieu has his work cut out to maintain a viable regime in the south is a question that is answered by the history of Communist regimes elsewhere.

'ROLL-BACK' POLICY

Both Russia and China went through a stage when they believed their very existence threatened — for instance, by the United States' policy of "roll-back" in the early 50s, when the avowed purpose of John Foster Dulles as secretary of state was to roll back the Communist system from the areas into whhich it had expanded. Hanoi, in imagining the threat to bereal now, may be a few years behind the times, but the men who have considered the United States as their principal enemy for nearly 10 years would certainly be ready to believe the worst about their adversary's intentions.

Indeed, the United States was aware this as one of Hanoi's major motives, and repeatedly sought to reassure the Communists that it did not intend to destroy the northern regime. American efforts to this end, which are described in the still secret volume of the Pentagon papers dealing with diplomatic negotiations, had no visible effect. Signs persisted that some of the Hanoi leaders believed that the United States sought the destruction of the regime.

FEAR EXPLOITED

It is this fear that the northern regime might itself be liquidated that has been exploited by the Nixon administration to bring Hanoi to its knees.

The United States might be in no position, politically or psychologically, to expand its bombing offensive against the north to include explicitly civilian targets and the administrative nerve-centres of the system. The outcry against even the presumed bombing of the dikes proved that much. But there was one voice that was crying out a different message — that of President Thieu of South Vietnam.

He believed that the dikes should have been bombed, and if his air force had the capability to do so, they probably would have been bombed. At least, Hanoi would certainly believe that Thieu, given the American weapons, would do all he could to destroy the northern regime, starting with the dikes — and perhaps not going much beyond that, because not much more would be required.

THIEU MISTRUSTED

Thieu and, before him, his vice-president, air force commander, and lately rival, General Nguyen Cao Ky, repeatedly and sharply have pressed the United States to give them the aircraft capable of performing such operations. The United States has refused precisely because it does not trust Thieu with them. Some U.S. officials, particularly those in Saigon and in the air force, have urged this course of action on Washington. To Hanoi, even the least sign that this was being discussed would confirm its worst fears.

Hanoi was certainly aware of the study launched by the Pentagon on White House orders, immediately after the beginning of the Easter offensive, about the best way to strengthen the South Vietnam armed forces. The Pentagon task force examined the question of re-equipping the South Vietnam air force with more powerful aircraft — something that Hanoi would certainly know — but, according to Defence Secretary Laird, there is no intention to proceed with any such plans. Would Hanoi believe him, or would it suspect the worst?

Appeal To Hold Auction

The United Appeal is asking individuals and businesses for another kind of donation this year.

They need auctionable items of every description for their auction.

The auction, Nov. 6 at Bay Street Armory, will be the climax of this year's campaign, and officials hope to raise $6,000 to $10,000 to put the appeal over its goal of $724,931.

New, used and antique items are all needed for the auction, which will also feature a rummage sale.

The evening will include a fashion show, a band and a pie-throwing exhibition (featuring local public officials).

Anybody wishing to make a donation is asked to phone 388-4333 to arrange pick-up of the items.

2ND RACE BATTLE ON SHIP

HONOLULU (UPI) — The U.S. navy has disclosed that four persons were injured and 11 arrested as the result of a "racial battle" aboard the fleet oiler Hassayampa.

It was the second reported racial brawl aboard a navy ship within a week.

The incident occurred while the Hassayampa was at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

The four injured all were white and the 11 arrested all were black.

A navy spokesman said he could not immediately explain why only blacks were arrested, why only whites were injured and how many crewmen were involved in the fighting.

PANDA AN-AN DIES

MOSCOW (AP) — An-An, the amorous Russian male panda, died alone in Moscow Zoo Sunday, not of heartbreak but of heart failure, zoo officials reported.

His death at 15 years of age followed by three months that of Chi-Chi, the female panda from Britain who twice rejected his advances.

WHAT MAKES '73 MERCURY MONTEGO SO GREAT?

Cutlass, Skylark, Le Mans, Sebring, Monte Carlo and Charger.

With competition this good, we had to make Montego great. We engineered better ideas into Montego. Ideas that make it easy to handle. Ideas that give it a smooth, quiet ride. We styled it with a long, low, classic profile that makes it an elegant, attractive-looking car. In short, we engineered it to fit your lifestyle.

Engineered with big ideas.

Riding comfort and ease of handling. These are the big things that make Montego such a great car. A quiet car because of solid body-frame construction. Designed in two wheelbase lengths — 114" for the 2-door and 118" for the 4-door — Montego handles with ease in the city and on the highway. Yet you enjoy the ride of a big car. Montego has a wide stance that holds the road and the high-stability front suspension and coil spring rear suspension are similar to our most expensive cars. In fact, Montego's ride is so smooth, quiet and comfortable, you'll actually think you're riding in a car that costs much more.

Comfort in luxury ideas.

As well as superb riding comfort, Montego has many luxury features that add to your overall comfort. Deep, foam-padded cushion seats in richly woven fabrics and vinyls. 100% nylon loop-pile carpeting. Flow-thru ventilation. Extra sound-proofing materials that keep quiet in and street noise out.

Montego MX Brougham Interior

Convenience in small ideas.

There are a lot of little things built into Montego that add to its overall value. This year, for driver convenience, we've lighted more of the controls. For more comfort and better visibility, there are new, low-back bench seats with adjustable headrests. And every Montego is equipped with an automatic parking brake release and an inside hood latch release.

Strong ideas in safety.

Every Montego carries the whole complement of Ford Motor Company Safety Features including energy-absorbing S-frame construction, steel guard rails in every door and the new energy-absorbing bumper system.

It's your move.

Last year, Montego's sales reached an all time high. Find out for yourself what makes Montego so great. Test drive any of the exciting 9 new Montego models today at your Mercury dealers.

Pollution-Free Smelting Process Enters B.C.

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

A newly-incorporated Vancouver company, Estern Hydrosmelting Ltd., has hopes of selling its anti-pollution processes to British Columbia's second copper smelter.

Smelter number one is expected to be started very soon by Cominco, using their own pollution-free system.

Western Hydrosmelting is being formed by Wright Engineers Ltd. of Vancouver and Electrowin Inc. of Delaware. Electrowin is owned by Alberni Mines Ltd. of Port Alberni and Crescent Development Corp. of New York.

Roy Ellerman, manager of the metallurgy division of Wright Engineers and a director of Western Hydrosmelting, said the new company is developing a process for fixing sulphur as calcium sulphate or gypsum.

The gypsum is virtually insoluble and can be retained in tailing-ponds. This process greatly reduced emissions of sulphur dioxide, the gas which produces a strong sulphur smell.

Ellerman said the process would reduce the emissions to a point well within the levels that are expected to be ordered by both Canadian and United States pollution control authorities.

Semi-pilot projects have shown virtually complete elimination of sulphur dioxide, he said.

Now, Western Hydrosmelting plans to go into full pilot project studies which will be an expensive step.

Ellerman said the company is faced with the choice of internal financing or taking on a senior partner to finance the venture.

The senior partner probably would be found in the southwestern United States, he said, although a Canadian firm might be interested.

Seven copper smelters in Arizona face orders to trap sulphur dioxide gases or eventually be forced to close.

Estimated cost of developing systems to trap sulphur dioxide gases in smelters in Arizona and two other states is $105 billion, according to a recent engineering study.

Last week Premier Dave Barrett predicted some of the Arizona smelters would have to close, producing a shortage of copper and giving B.C. an opportunity to sell its product on the world market.

Premier Barrett said he was in negotiations with Cominco on the smelter but would give no details on cost-sharing or pollution processes.

The provincial government has said, however, it is confident Cominco can build a pollution-free smelter and the only thing left to be negotiated was the financing of the project.

Premier Barrett has said the provincial government wants some financial share of the project if the company hopes to receive investment capital from the province.

He said he was confident Cominco or some other company would be building a smelter soon. He added that there was room for a second smelter in B.C.

Ellerman said that as far as he knew there had not yet been any discussions between his firm and the provincial government on the anti-pollution system for a smelter.

However his firm hoped to market its system in B.C. and the United States after the pilot project has been completed.

"I believe there is a need for a second smelter in B.C.," he said.

Four-Mile Conveyor Proposed

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. has proposed using a four-mile conveyor belt to transport bulk materials to Cleveland industries located along the Cuyahoga River.

James P. Fritsch, manager of the belting products division of Goodyear in Akron, said the Greater Cleveland Growth Association has asked his firm to examine the project.

Fritsch said the $5.6-million main-haul conveyer could operate at a speed of 650 feet a minute and deliver 4,750 tons each hour.

Fritsch said about 50 per cent of the bulk materials imported into Cleveland are unloaded at the inland dock facilities. He said the narrowness and twisting of the river prevents large ships from making the round trip in less than six hours, while the conveyer would deposit its cargo in 30 minutes.

Abitibi

Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. reports net earnings for the nine months to Sept. 30 of $4,831,111 or 24 cents a share, up from $2,666,000 and 12 cents in the same period of 1971.

The year-to-date earnings include $347,000, Abitibi's 40 per cent share of income from Mattabi Mines Ltd.

Imperial Oil

Imperial Oil reports earnings for the nine months to Sept. 30 totalled $106 million or 82 cents a share compared with $101 million or 78 cents a share during the same period of 1971.

W. O. Twaits, board chairman said Thursday that earnings were affected by heavy exploration expenditures in the Arctic and Atlantic.

Zenith

Zenith Radio Corp. has reported record results for both the third quarter and the first nine months of the year, citing increased color television business.

For the quarter, Zenith reported profits of $13.44 million or 70 cents a share on sales of $218.47 million, up $6.80 million or 36 cents on sales of $174.39 million over the same quarter last year.

Kaiser

Kaiser Resources Ltd. reports a consolidated net profit of $265,000 or three cents a share for the third quarter of 1972, including an anticipated insurance settlement amount of $643,000.
quarter of 1972, including an anticipated insurance settlement amount of $643,000.

Operating results for the quarter, exclusive of the anticipated insurance settlement, were a loss of $378,000 on sales of $25,239,000.

In the third quarter of 1971, Kaiser Resources had consolidated net earnings of $37,000 on sales of $26,054,000.

Electrical Manufacturers Hurt by Open-Door Trade

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian electrical manufacturers are being threatened by low-cost imports allowed into the country by an "open door" trade policy, the newly-elected president of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association says.

William J. Chessman, president of Westinghouse Canada Ltd., said "more than a billion dollars worth of electrical products and their components was imported into Canada over the past year."

Imports are growing at a faster rate than the domestic market, he said. During the first seven months of 1972, imports made up 33 per cent of the domestic market for electrical products — a record. A decade ago about 23 per cent of such products were imported.

Federal NDP's Need Blamed for Session

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace charged Wednesday Premier Barrett called the special legislative session to improve the electoral chances of the federal New Democratic Party.

Wallace, speaking in the throne speech debate, said there is little need for the current session because measures introduced by the government could have been done by order-in-council.

Wallace said the government had omitted legislation dealing with the 5,000 British Columbians who are in private hospitals and under chronic care.

He also said little has been done to improve the unemployment situation in the province, which he said has taken a "tragic jump" in recent months.

In fact, Wallace said, it is likely unemployment for unskilled workers will get worse instead of better as a result of the government's legislation.

The Oak Bay MLA urged Barrett to make sure that the increases to old age pensioners would not be taken up by increases in rent and said there should have been amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act to ensure this.

Barrett nodded his head in apparent agreement. He has indicated recently that the government will have "something to say" about rents when the old age pension legislation is discussed in detail before the house.

Wallace said he is dismayed that no action has been taken to improve conditions in the house itself. He said there is no need to assign Speaker Gordon Dowding to make a study of other legislatures when there are reforms — like a 30-minute question period — which could be instituted immediately and upon which there is general agreement in the house.

Liberal leader Anderson pinpointed railway rates of the British Columbia Railway as contributing to the high cost of living, and being one of the things the house should be debating.

Barrett's earlier statements that he will increase corporation taxes from 10 to 13 per cent will eventually pass on more cost to consumers, he said.

Anderson said the government might well have brought in a government reorganization bill, and created a ministry of intergovernmental affairs.

He also suggested that instead of luring executive assistants at $13,000 to $16,000 a year, some of the NDP backbenchers could have been put to work.

Included in McGeer's "bad books" and his reasons for their being there:

—Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi, for closing down the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen and the Willingdon School for Girls;

—Education Minister Eileen Dailly, for not yet releasing the Perry Report on higher education financing;

—Resources Minister Bob Williams, for dissolving the B.C. Energy Board;

—Labor Minister Bill King, for eliminating the B.C. Mediation Commission without first consulting the commissioners themselves.

McGeer also criticized the NDP for not establishing a committe to set up the standing committee of the legislature as its first item of business.

He said an important role is to be played in the future by the public accounts committee, whose job is to see that government monies are being spent in the proper manner.

NECK STUCK OUT AGAINST TRADITION

Harold Steves, New Democrat MLA for Richmond, believes he is the only member not to have worn a tie at the opening of the legislature Tuesday.

"During the briefing session at the caucus meeting before the opening we were informed that shirts and ties were expected," Steves said Wednesday.

"My personal preference is for a Western-style tie with clasp, and I wore it during the opening ceremonies," he said.

"Emery Barnes (party whip) was seated beside me in a dashiki, but I believe he was wearing a knotted garment which qualified as a tie," Steves said.

The Waffle group founding member said he felt formalities associated with the opening should be revised.

Ottawa Dike Plan Refused

Resources Minister Robert Williams has rejected an offer by the federal government to exempt local governments from having to share in the cost of flood control capital works.

On Wednesday Williams released an exchange of letters with federal Environment Minister Jack Davis, who offered to rewrite a 1968 Ottawa-B.C. agreement on flood control measures.

A major cause of delay in building flood control works, Davis said, has been financial problems in municipalities needing protection. The municipalities have been required to pay 10 per cent of the costs.

Davis said in his letter he believes the two senior governments "should raise all the money necessary to carry out the Fraser River Flood Control Program."

In his reply, Williams said he could not agree with this action.

"My view is that the level of economic soundness of this assistance program will suffer if the local authorities are not required to make capital contributions to the structural flood-control measures which will enhance the land values.

"However, I would be prepared to consider a reduction in the present local cost-sharing formula in order to prevent excessive local taxation."

In his letter Davis also asked that the province cooperate with Ottawa in carrying out extensive "environmental impact" studies before building any large flood control upstream on the Fraser.

Davis says Ottawa "will require" these studies and "they will be published."

Williams replied that "I fully recognize the public interest and importance of such studies."

Williams says the new offers by Ottawa are essentially what B.C. has been proposing since the 1968 agreement was made.

One such aspect was that the administrative arrangements are "too cumbersome."

"It appears that you generally accept the proposals made by the British Columbia members at the last meeting of the Federal Provincial Joint Advisory Board.

Another major aspect of the negotiations will be the extension of the flood-control program outside the lower mainland.

Davis says works should be built upstream on the Fraser and on its major tributaries. "Had dikes been in place at Prince George and on the Thompson near Kamloops, many of the losses which occurred this spring could have been prevented.

"Besides, diking in the lower mainland should be seen in the broadest possible context and should be judged in relation to the building of reservoirs at the higher elevations as well."

Williams replied that he welcomes this change in federal policy, "which change has been requested by British Columbia from time to time in the past."

Grants Attract Health Board

Greater Victoria's metro health board showed immediate interest when it learned provincial grants are available to hire "public health educators."

The educators are apparently hired on a temporary basis to assist in developing and initiating such projects as drug education programs, the board was told.

The money to pay their salaries comes from the province's drug, alcohol and cigarette education fund.

The board voted to immediately find out requirements to qualify for a grant.

And Wham-O:
"What's a nice big interior like you doing inside a Volkswagen?"
There's plenty of leg room up front.
There's lots of head room.
The windshield is curved and pushed away from your nose. It's 42% larger. (That's the windshield, not your nose.)
The padded dash is completely redesigned and easier to read (for those of you who like to read dashes).
The seats are more comfortable, curved and contoured to your body.
Inertia-type seat belts buckle up as standard equipment.
And wonder of wonders, it is now much easier for passengers to get to the back of the Bug.
With all the newfound room, we had to find a new ventilation system.
Which we did.
And it's so good that, now, even the side windows can be ventilated and defogged.
As for outside improvements, they're mostly hidden. (Although the taillights are nearly twice as large as ever before.)
Altogether we made 20 improvements in the Super Beetle for 1973.
But without a doubt, the biggest improvement of all is the feeling you get inside.

Plea Made for Northern B.C.

NDP backbencher Graham Lea of Prince Rupert called Wednesday for three new provincial government departments — northern affairs, fisheries and consumer affairs.

Lea, in seconding the speech from the throne, made a plea for the people of his constituency and for the other people of the north.

"This is a big province, and we are a long way from Victoria," he said in advocating a department of northern affairs. "We have special problems and there should be a special department to handle them."

Lea said the people of the north are having to put up with excessive costs for their food and shelter and urged development of highway and railway links with the southern parts of the province in order to reduce costs.

He said planning of such expansion will have to be careful and in full co-operation with the federal government.

"There's been too much name-calling," he said of past relations between Victoria and Ottawa.

In arguing for a provincial department of fisheries, Lea said the fishermen of the province need a "buffer zone" between themselves and the federal department.

Lea said a department of consumer affairs is needed, not only for the people of the north, but for all people in B.C.

The MLA referred to the NDP's campaign slogan in the northern constituencies during the election: Northern Development for People.

"We want expansion, we want development, but we don't want it if it means more pollution and depletion of our natural resources. Development has to be orderly and planned."

Lea said if rail and port facilities can be better co-ordinated in the north, pulp mill operations can be made to be more economic.

Lea seconded a motion by Daisy Webster (NDP—Vancouver Little Mountain) to move the speech from the throne.

In her address, Mrs. Webster outlined the history of the New Democratic Party and its forerunner, the CCF.

She said that now the government is heading into a technological era in a resource-rich province, it must "realize the importance of services to people and not merely a policy growth for growth's sake."

She said greater emphasis must be placed on equal opportunities of education for all and a more efficient operation of medical and health services.

MANPOWER TO MAIL VACANCIES

OTTAWA (CP) — The manpower department will begin in a few weeks to mail lists of job vacancies to unemployment insurance and welfare recipients as part of a new plan for the department to be more aggressive, officials said Wednesday.

The first mailings will go out from manpower offices in the Ottawa-Hull area, and a decision will be made before the end of the year on extending the plan to all parts of the country.

The mailed lists will include job vacancies and opportunities for the unemployed to take job training, either wholly or partly at government expense.

Twilight Zone Big Plus for Pitchers

OAKLAND (AP) — Cincinnati Reds and Oakland Athletics entered the Twilight zone again tonight for the fourth game of the 1972 World Series.

And because of it, both teams looked forward to another low-scoring game following Cincinnati's 1-0 triumph Wednesday night that cut Oakland's lead in the best-of-seven series to 2-1.

"The twilight made the difference for me," said winning pitcher Jack Billingham after gaining the victory with ninth-inning help from Clay Carroll.

"You'll see another good one tonight with Don Gullett pitching," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson.

"Maybe the rest will be one-run games too," said Oakland manager Dick Williams.

The first two games were played in Cincinnati last weekend, but the 3-2 and 2-1 Oakland successes were fashioned without any assistance from nature.

When the Series switched to the Oakland Coliseum this week, the starting time for the contest in California was 5:30 p.m. That's the worst time for a hitter because of the fast-fading light.

Cincinnati slugger Johnny Bench, who went 0-for-4 Wednesday night and struck out three times, had been apprehensive about the conditions.

"I hate to hit in the twilight in Oakland," he had said.

But while it hurt the major leagues' top home-run hitter, it also didn't do too much for the Oakland team.

"I don't usually strike out that many batters," said Billingham, who fanned seven Athletics. "The twilight no doubt helped me."

The journeyman righthander, who gave up three hits through eight innings, started the ninth by throwing three straight balls to Mike Epstein while the crowd of 49,401 at the Coliseum cheered.

Anderson then decided that Billingham had gone far enough.

Carroll then came in to preserve that shaky lead by getting Epstein on a bouncer, Bando on a soft line drive and George Henderick on an easy hit to the mound.

"Jack was tired," said Anderson. "I should have taken him out when he went 2-0, not 3-0."

Billingham agreed.

"I had pitched eight strong innings already and I didn't want to come out of the game," said Billingham. "You never like to leave in a situation like that."

But while he was in there, the right-hander, who has an unspectacular .500 lifetime record, fed the Athletics a steady diet of sinker balls and allowed only three flies during his tenure.

"They took a lot of strikes low and away," he said. "They were taking an awful lot of them."

His only jam came in the sixth inning, when the Athletics had men on first and third with none out, and the bases loaded with one man gone. But Billingham got Pete Bando on a rally-killing double play.

John (Blue Moon) Odom was equally good for Oakland, striking out 11 before running into trouble in the seventh inning, when the Reds scored the game's only run.

Tony Perez singled and was sacrificed to second base by Denis Menke. Cesar Geronimo, hitless in his first nine World Series appearances, then laced a single to centre field.

Perez rounded third, slipped and fell on a field made soggy by 10 straight days of rain. But he picked himself up and scored the winning run when Oakland shortstop Bert Campaneris made no relay throw.

"I didn't see him fall down," said Anderson, "but that's the way things have been going for us in this Series before tonight."

Williams has tapped Ken Holtzman to face Gullett in a matchup of hard-throwing southpaws tonight. The fifth game will also be played here Friday afternoon and the sixth and seventh, if necessary, in Cincinnati Saturday and Sunday.

Mitch Goes Russian In Cougars' New Look

At 54, Mitch Pechet obviously isn't too old to learn. Already he has taken a leaf or two out of the book of Ivan, the Russian hockey player. Now he intends to make book on it.

This was more than evident Tuesday night at Memorial Arena as the Cougars, awestruck for two periods, bowed to the Medicine Hat Tigers, 6-4, in what might have been a good hockey game had the locals started to play earlier.

As it was, it gave Pechet a chance to experiment, and experiment he did; and frankly, it almost paid off.

When Pechet was younger, like 17, he was selected because of his ability as a hockey player to turn professional with the New York Rangers. Which he did, and he immediately became a devotee of the late Lester Patrick. What was good enough for Lester, was great for Pechet. He listened and he learned. Later, when his hockey career was done, Pechet made it big in hotels on the prairies, and last year, in his semi-retirement, he came to Victoria as managing director of the Cougars. Besides, he had a piece of the action.

Fred Hucul, a former Maple Leaf, was the coach then. But Fred became reluctant to continue halfway through the season, and left. Pechet took over, and hasn't let go. Now, he is back for a second term, his first for a full season.

No Room for Complacency Here

"Kids are great," he said on the occasion of the Cougars' season opener in New Westminster a while ago, "and I think we'll get on just fine." Of course, that was after the Cougars had won the opener, and Mitch was up and down the aisle in the bus checking on the well being of his heroes. If he was lightly prejudiced then, he's about to make sure.

Because now it is two weeks later, and the Cougars are two and two for the year, and if not quite a first-place club, nobody is yet certain just how good, or bad, they might be.

At the moment, inconsistency is their main problem. That was plain on Tuesday. They played badly, and seemingly without much desire for the first two periods against Medicine Hat, and were rather lucky to be down only 4-1, entering the third period.

Goalie Blaine Ferguson, though beaten four times, saved the day on many other occasions. He had made 21 saves in the second period alone.

What Pechet said to his players between periods isn't known, but suddenly in the third, things started to happen, and nearly all good for the Cougars. At least, the players started to skate, and check, and in a brand, new style. Brand new for junior hockey in our town.

Pechet had decided that he would try something he has wanted to try since the Team Canada-Team Russia series, perhaps even before that.

He went for the wholesale substitution bit, five players at a time, and not necessarily the established routine of three forwards, and two defencemen at a time either.

What Skating, Checking Will Do

At one time he had five forwards on the ice, on another occasion there were four forwards and a defenceman. He even had a defenceman playing centre, or taking the faceoffs, and quickly thsCougars came alive.

This was a new, free-wheeling style, and when they hemmed the Tigers in their own end, they began to look like a hockey team. They even got close, at 5-4, before an empty-net goal closed them out. The instant fact is that they had turned the game right around.

Pechet had proved a point, if only to his own satisfaction, and perhaps only for the time being. But still, the players had to be impressed. They all know now, or should, that there is no longer any particular reason why the mills of change have to grind slowly. If hockey is a five-man game, Russian style, and it works, let's play it that way, or at least try. What was good enough for Ivan against Team Canada may turn out to be the Cougars' secret weapon.

Pechet later admitted that he also was instituting something new for junior hockey. He has started a playbook on other teams. Bob Pulford of the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL did almost precisely the same thing here this fall, the difference being that his own players would be required to keep one, and study it. Questions would be asked. This is what the Soviets did in their Team Canada preparations. They isolated the NHL stars, and charted their every move. So why not?

Why not, indeed?

I happen to think it's great that Pechet has the nerve to do this sort of thing. "We'll know how to play them next time," he said of the Tigers.

The only problem is — now it's no longer secret.

FIRST-EVER GIRLS' SOCCER TEAM at University of Victoria tunes up for games Saturday against Mount Douglas Secondary School and Victoria General Hospital nurses' residence at UVic campus. Boy Meets Girl in Soccer

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

All Doug Manning and Dave McPhee wanted was to meet some girls. They did — 27 of them who get their kicks playing soccer.

"Doug and I were working for the athletic department last month," explained McPhee, a third-year arts and science student at University of Victoria. "We were registering students for sports activities."

So when a co-ed asked if there was a women's soccer team, the two were happy to oblige.

"There wasn't a team for girls," McPhee admitted, "but we figured by letting them sign up, we could at least get to meet some of them."

"Mostly, we didn't believe that many girls would play soccer," interjected Manning, a third-year physical education student from Penticton. "But 67 signed up and all of a sudden, we had to become coaches."

Coach Manning and manager McPhee still were skeptical when they called their first workout a month ago.

"It was really funny," McPhee said. "Our first practice was on a Wednesday and it was windy and rainy and cold. But we had 15 girls out."

Subsequent workouts, in better weather, have attracted 27 regulars. They were split into "A" and "B" teams following a 1-1 tie in last week's intersquad game.

Although girls' soccer has been played in Victoria high schools, this is the first time UVic has tried it.

That makes opponents scarce, but UVic has two games lined up on the campus this Saturday. Victoria General Hospital nurses' residence is forming a team to play UVic's "B" side at 11:30 a.m. and the school's "A" team meets Mount Douglas Secondary girls at 1 p.m.

"We hope to raise some money to go to Vancouver next month," Manning said. "We've arranged a game against Vancouver General Hospital, which has a girls' team, and we're trying to talk UBC, Vancouver City College and Simon Fraser into forming teams."

The UVic girls have their own uniforms — old hockey jerseys donated by the athletic department. They fit pretty well, too, since they've shrunk.

At least four of the girls have played high school soccer and the rest are learning quickly.

"These girls are really amazing," said Manning. "I used to think girls weren't as athletically adaptable as men to sports like soccer, but they are."

And they're anything but timid.

"They're super-aggressive," Manning added.

Still, there are problems. The girls have a locker room but Manning has to change in the car.

There haven't been any hell-for-leather pep talks, either. As McPhee put it: "You can't stand on the sidelines and yell obscenities."

Especially if you'd like to date one or two of your players when the season is over. After all, wasn't that the original idea?

"If it was," McPhee chuckled, "nothing has developed from it. To them, we're just the coaches."

Oak Bay Back Dazzling in Fog

Sparked by the dazzling sprints of halfback Doug Archibald, Oak Bay Farmer Construction pummelled James Bay Athletic Association 58-7 Wednesday night to gain a share of first place in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League.

Despite the foggy conditions at Royal Athletic Park, Archibald threaded through his opponents with ease to score five touchdowns.

Quarterback Christie Sinclare scored one major and kicked four converts while the other Oak Bay touchdowns were recorded by Roy Sinden, Edgell Nelson and Ian Palidini.

Oak Bay, which led 26-0 at half-time, now is tied with Saanich Hornets for first place, but the latter club holds a game in hand.

Leisure Suits Emerson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Australia's Roy Emerson, playing in only his third tournament of this year's World Championship of Tennis series, advanced to the quarter-finals of the $50,000 international tournament Wednesday by defeating Graham Stilwell of Britain 6-0, 6-7, 6-1.

The 35-year-old world-class veteran then spoke of his age and the affect it has had on his game and lifestyle.

"You know, you slow down when you get older," said Emerson.

"I've only played in a few tournaments this year. I've been doing a lot of work at Mount Washington in New Hampshire coaching adults. I do about six hours a day and I'm really enjoying the change."

Against Stilwell, the Australian veteran broke service five times in the first and third sets, throwing an overpowering assortment of passing shots past the bewildered Briton.

Arthur Ashe of New York, second seed in the tourney, broke the service of Australian Fred Stolle once in the first set and twice in the second to win 6-4, 7-5 and advance to the quarter-finals.

Brian Fairlie of New Zealand won 4-6, 6-0, 6-1 over Alan Stone of Australia in other second-round play, and Tom Okker of the Netherlands downed Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 7-6, 6-0.

Haroon Rahim of Pakistan and Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., won a first-round doubles match over John Alexander and Phil Dent of Australia 6-4, 6-4.

In the first match of second-round doubles it was South African Cliff Drysdale teaming up with Stone to defeat Egypt's Ismail el Shafei and Fairlie 7-6, 4-6, 7-6.

Ashe and Bob Lutz of Tiburon, Calif., defeated Roy Barth of San Diego, Calif., and Tom Leonard of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-4 in second-round doubles play.

Hadfield Helps Ranger Rout Over Bruins

By The Canadian Press

Harry Sinden, whose position as executive manager of Boston Bruins makes him the No. 1 decision-maker on the National Hockey League club, told a Toronto press reception this week his soon-to-be published book, Hockey Showdown, "may take some of the heat off Hadfield."

Sinden, who coached Team Canada in its recent exciting hockey series with the Soviet Union, collaborated with Boston writer Will McDonough on the book encompassing Team Canada from its training camp to the conclusive final game in Moscow.

New York Rangers' Vic Hadfield jumped the team in Moscow and returned home amid speculation as to his reasoning and decision.

Much has been made of the incident and the Ranger winger added fuel to the discussions back home by insinuating Sinden didn't know how to handle his conglomerate of NHL stars.

SCORES FIRST GOAL

He probably still had that in the back of his mind Wednesday night when he scored the game's first goal en route to a 7-1 New York victory over Sinden's Bruins in the first meeting of the year between the two East Division giants.

Elsewhere, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3, Philadelphia Flyers nipped Los Angeles Kings 4-3, Minnesota North Stars blanked Atlanta Flames 6-0 and Montreal Canadiens earned a 4-4 tie with St. Louis Blues on Frank Mahovlich's last-minute goal.

"They can forget this game. . . . We'll be back," declared Boston centre Phil Esposito in the dressing room after the defending Stanley Cup champions regained their composure at New York.

"I'm tempted to say 'No comment'," observed Boston coach Tom Johnson, "but bluntly we played a lousy game."

The Rangers jumped into a 5-0 lead and gave goaltender Gilles Villemure an easy cushion to work on as they threw up a near airtight defence that allowed Boston only 23 shots.

Bill Fairbairn and Rod Seiling led the attack with two goals each on veteran Ed Johnston in a game that spawned ill feeling from the opening whistle.

Rangers' Glen Sather and Fred O'Donnell of Boston paired off in the first period when Boston's Mike Walton took a game misconduct for intervening. Then in the second Gene Carr was assessed a double minor and major for his fight with Boston's Garnet Bailey.

BRISTOL PHILLIES' CHOICE?

OAKLAND (AP) — Dave Bristol, who already has managed in both the American and National Leagues, is the choice to be the new manager of Philadelphia Phillies, it was learned here Wednesday.

The selection of the 39-year-old Bristol, was learned from sources who are here to attend the World Series between Cincinnati Reds and Oakland Athletics.

Bristol, who managed the Reds four years and the Milwaukee Brewers 2½ seasons, is scheduled to be officially named manager the last week of October or the first week in November.

Paul Owens, the Philadelphia general manager, did not deny that Bristol was his choice for the job, but said he still had other candidates to interview for the position. Bristol confirmed he has talked to Owens about the manager's post.

Frank Lucchesi began the 1972 baseball season as the Philadelphia manager but was fired in June. Owens then replaced him and held both the manager and general manager posts. He gave up the manager's job at the end of the season.

Superb Autumn Angling In Black Creek Estuary

For fly fishermen, late October and early November days can provide angling experiences unmatched for excitement and trophy fish.

From many points of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland, anglers will travel to fish the Black Creek estuary for the masses of fish schooling in this area. The estuary of Black Creek marks the northern boundary of Miracle Beach provincial park, which has all facilities required for a family camping weekend.

Fish are readily available for the angler at the estuary because there is no water flow in the lower miles of this stream during late summer and fall. The ephmeral characteristic, a flow at only certain periods of the year, in this stream is the direct result of past ruthless logging practices in the upper watershed and of an excessive number of water licences exceeding the actual flow of water.

Until heavy rains begin in November, the coho salmon native to Black Creek (an estimated adult population exceeding 1,200) will school on the shallow estuary flats, permitting the fly angler to wade in the surf and cast to them.

The tremendous power of these fighting coho can only be appreciated when experienced. They are the mature adults, or hook-nosed northerns, that weigh from 10 to 20 pounds. Their strike varies from a slight nudge to a smashing hit that virtually tears the rod from the angler's hand. Once the fish feels the line pull, he heads straight for the middle of the gulf. This first run usually takes the angler right through his fly line and well into the necessary backing. But it is usually the second run that seems to continue endlessly. Half an hour is the minimum fight I have had to beach one of these Black Creek silvers.

I have found the rising tide the most productive as it seems to draw the fish to the shallows for the obvious smell of the stream's ground water. Stormy days need not be too big a problem. I have cast with the wind into the troughs between the waves and struck fish in only inches of water.

For casting I have found the Cortland sink-tip line easiest to handle in these circumstances. It puts the wet fly down for the fish but at the same time the floating body allows an easy pick-up for the next cast.

The choice of flys for the angler is wide but, I have generally found one with a red body to be most effective. But, remember to keep hooks sharp to hold during the long playing time required to beach your fish. I usually use the multiple steelhead flies, size six, like the Rainbow, Thor or Skykomish Sunrise. A belt net can be carried to land the fish, but this is the individual angler's choice.

Chest waders are a must for this cold sea water and the swells, along with insulated trousers for added comfort. The swelling surf will often douse the angler unless he has adequate rain gear, which is also recommended for the changeable coastal weather.

Anglers must remember to wash their gear thoroughly with fresh water after exposure to salt water. Particular attention should be paid to the reel, which will sieze after repeated use in the salt water.

While the angler hopes each strike will bring one of the hook-nosed northerns to the surface, four out of five hits will produce a jack salmon or cutthroat trout. There can be no complaint however when these fish strike and the result is three or more pounds of fighting fury on a fly rod battling in the surf.

Goals and Brawls Abound

By The Canadian Press

Winnipeg Jets and Calgary Centennials used rapid-fire scoring outbreaks in the second period Wednesday night to post victories in the Western Canada Hockey League.

The Jets erupted for five second-period goals against Swift Current Broncos in a 9-6 triumph and Calgary duplicated the feat in their home opener, a 9-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings.

The Calgary-Edmonton game was marked by a series of brawls that resulted in 18 major penalties—10 in the third period—and two game misconducts.

In the only other WCHL game Wednesday night, New Westminster Bruins overcame the touring Medicine Hat Tigers 4-3 to prevent the Tigers stretching their lead in the western division. Swift Current remained in first place in the eastern division.

Winnipeg fell behind 2-0 before 1,112 fans in the first six minutes of the first period and trailed 2-1 after the first period, but bounced back to lead 6-4 at the second intermission.

Gary Wagner, Mike Korney and Randy Knight scored two goals each for Winnipeg. Singles were fired by Dave Elliott, Laurie Deprez and Don Larway. Korney's second goal went into an empty net and capped the outbreak against Swift Current, which had surrendered only 10 goals in five previous games.

Calgary's performance, marked by 21 of 43 penalties, was highlighted by two-goal performances by Mart Kissel and John Senkpiel and four-point efforts by Mike Clarke and Jerry Holland, who each had a goal and three assists.

Holland now has nine goals, compared with 10 for talented Darcy Rota, who scored twice Wednesday for the Oil Kings, defending WCHL champions. Curtis Shokoples added the other Edmonton goal, before 2,913 fans.

It was the second goal of the game for Kennedy and sparked a wild protest by the Tigers, who broke sticks over the boards trying to get at fans.

Medicine Hat coach Jack Shupe first believed the shot by Kennedy hit the goalpost. He called defenceman Jim McCrimmon to the bench for a consultation and a New Westminster fan threw a box of facial tissues on the ice. After that, Tiger players attempted to get at the fans.

Soviets Still in Race

Times News Services

The Soviet Union kept alive its hopes of qualifying for the 1974 World Cup soccer finals by beating the Irish Republic, 2-1, in Dublin Wednesday night.

The Russians had to win to have any hope of qualifying after losing, 1-0, to France last week in their opening group nine match. Fedorov and Kolotov scored for the Russians before Conway netted for the Irish.

Bulgaria opened its Group 6 campaign with a 3-0 victory over Northern Ireland in a brusing match in Sofia. Northern Ireland's star forward George Best was sent off eight minutes from the end for a foul tackle which climaxed a violent match.

Scotland, which has not qualified for the World Cup finals since 1958, made an impressive start in Group eight by whipping Denmark, 4-1, in Copenhagen.

Yugoslavia meets Spain in Las Palmas today in the most intriguing of this week's six World Cup qualifying matches.

Group two will be in the spotlight during the weekend when Italy, runnerup to Brazil in the 1970 World Cup, plays Switzerland and Turkey faces Luxembourg.

Qualifying competition continues until the end of next year. The 14 survivors will join cup-holder Brazil and host West Germany in the 16-nation finals the following year.

BASKETBALL LOOP SEEKS ANOTHER TEAM

Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League needs at least one more team.

After operating last season as a five-team loop, Restoration Services and Independents have decided not to compete — leaving only Hotel Douglas, London Boxing Club and Price and Smith. The league is scheduled start play on Oct. 30 and organizers are hoping enough players and a sponsor can be rounded up for a fourth squad.

Webster Fires Three Goals For Whalers

HOUSTON (AP) — New England Whalers, behind the three goals of Tom Webster, defeated Houston Aeros 4-1 in a World Hockey Association game Wednesday.

Gord Labossiere counted New England's other goal while Ted Taylor was the Houston marksman, giving Aeros a 1-0 lead after only 2½ minutes of play.

Soccer Vikings Want Title Back

University of Victoria Vikings hope to win back their college soccer championship this weekend in Calgary where they meet three other schools in the Canada West Athletic Association tournament.

Vikings, who had won three titles in a row in the old Western Canada Intercollegiate Assocaition, lost to Alberta last year. The two schools are favored on the weekend.

The round-robin tournament starts Friday with Calgary meeting Alberta and UVic playing Saskatchewan. It's Vikings against Calgary and Saskatchewan against Alberta Saturday while Sunday's games have Saskatchewan playing Calgary and UVic playing Alberta.

Canadian Golf Team Nine Shots Off Pace

BUENOS AIRES (CP) — Argentina took a three-stroke lead after the first round of the amateur men's team golf championship Wednesday over the windy Olivos course.

The young Argentine team had a score of 212, trailed closely by Australia with 215.

Other leaders behind Argentina and Australia were West Germany and Spain at 217, Britain with 218, and the United States, France, Canada and Japan all with 221.

There are 32, four-man teams in the contest for the world's championship and the Eisenhower Trophy that is scheduled to end Saturday after 72 holes. An 18-hole playoff will be held Sunday in case of a tie.

Keith Alexander of Calgary shot a two-over-par 73 while Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., and Dave Barr of Kelowna, each shot 74s. Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver shot a 75 but only the top three scores of each team are counted.

Seven Stars Charged for Disturbance

ATLANTA (AP) — Seven members of the Minnesota North Stars hockey team have been arrested on charges ranging from public drunkenness to creating a turmoil.

Police said Dennis Hextall, Dennis O'Brien, Fred Harvey, Jude Drouin, Gilles Gilbert, Ted Harris and Danny Grant were arrested in a lounge late Monday. They were released on bonds ranging from $200 to $1,300.

Police said Hextall, Harvey, Grant and Drouin were charged with creating a turmoil; Gilbert with interfering with a police officer; and Harris with criminal trespass. O'Brien and Harris were released under $1,300 bond and the other bonds were $200.

Rebounding Tyees Tied for Second

Victoria Tyees, defending provincial champions, valuted into a three-way deadlock for second place in the Victoria High School Soccer League by hammering out a 6-2 decision over visiting Mt. Douglas on Wednesday.

Only the top two clubs qualify for the playoff final on Nov. 10 at Royal Athletic Park and a chance to enter the provincial tournament Nov. 16-18 in Victoria.

Gary McLaren and Wayne Long fired two goals each to pace the Tyees' victory while singles were added by Steve Forslund and John Iverson.

Forslund's goal was his 15th of the season.

Centre-forward Gord Cross jolted Tyees early by staking Mt. Douglas to a 2-1 lead in the first 20 minutes, but the home club rallied with three more goals before half time.

SWEDES EYE SEMI-PRO HOCKEY

STOCKHOLM (CP-AP) — The Swedish Hockey Federation hopes to set up a Scandinavian hockey league on a semi-professional basis in cooperation with the Finnish and Norwegian federations.

The move would be in answer to North American plans to organize pro hockey in Europe, reliable sources here said Wednesday.

Stig Nilsson, secretary-general, said a proposal will be presented to the board of the Swedish Hockey Federation next week.

The semi-pro teams would not only play in the proposed Scandinavian league but participate in their own national leagues.

In mid-September, Bruce Norris, owner of the National Hockey League Detroit Red Wings, and two American associates announced plans for a European pro league that would start operating in October, 1973, in Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, West Germany and England.

Cutler Passes Herron In Western Point Race

By Canadian Press

For much of the 1972 Canadian Football League season, Mack Herron, chunky running back with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, has been the best in the West.

But it's traditional in Canada for the kickers to dominate the scoring and in the official CFL statistics released Monday, kicker Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos rose from second place to knock off the man who has scored the most touchdowns in the country.

Cutler, a Victoria athlete who played football at Simon Fraser University, has 97 points on 30 converts, 18 field goals and 13 singles. Herron, a two-year veeteran with Winnipeg from Kansas State, has 90 points on 15 touchdowns.

The leading scorer in the country remains Jerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders, with 109 points on one touchdown, 24 converts, 24 field goals and seven converts.

In the top five scorers in the EFC, there is only one player whose main talent lies elsewhere than his big toe — Garney Henley of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, moved to offence this year from a defensive back spot, who has 48 points on eight touchdowns for fourth place behind Organ, Hamilton's Ian Sunter and Don Sweet of Montreal Aluettes.

Tension Eased at New Centre

duncan cowichan

DUNCAN — A more relaxed atmosphere is offered now that the Duncan Mental Health Centre has moved to new premises, says administrator Jack Hutton.

Hutton said the centre moved over the weekend from the Margaret Moss Health Centre to 3046 Gibbons Road, which is across from the Cowichan and District Hospital entrance.

Hutton said workers now have working space instead of having to play musical chairs as they did in the old facilities where there were only four offices for six persons.

The new facilities are in a modern home that has been renovated to provide enough office space but still retains a "homelike atmosphere" which helps when dealing with people, Hutton said.

The facilities accommodate: Hutton; boarding home social worker Faye Griffith; Miss Griffith's case aid worker Alice Swensen; psychiatrist Dr. Nick Chwelos; psychiatrist Dr. Frances Wood; secretary Doreen Whittaker; clerk Jean Anglin; and psychologists Dr. Andrew Kerr, Barbara Peter and Joanne Cartwright.

Many of the workers only come to the centre a few days a week.

With the larger facilities, Hutton said the centre will be able to be more available to the community. By being directly across from the hospital, Hutton said workers will be able to offer more direct service to patients.

Open house to the public will be held in early November.

$46M Difference On Hydro Bids

VANCOUVER (CP) — A consortium of three companies had the low bid of three submitted to B.C. Hydro Wednesday for construction of the underground powerhouse at the Mica Creek Dam, last phase of the giant Columbia River Treaty power project.

The bid, by Foundation Co. of Canada Ltd., Vancouver; Canadian Comstock International, Toronto; and Janin Constructio Ltd., Montreal; was for $112,487,000, more than $46 million under the next-lowest bid.

The second low bid was from a seven-firm group and was for $158,909,975. In the consortium are Mannex Co. Ltd., Calgary; Dawson Construction Ltd., Vancouver; Peter Kiewit Sons (Canada) Ltd., Vancouver; Brown and Root Ltd., Edmonton; Atlas Construction Co. Ltd., Montreal; C. A. Pitts Construction Eastern Ltd., Toronto; and H. B. Zachry Co., Anaheim, Calif.

The third bid was for $163,388,355. Members of this consortium are Atkinson-Harney Corp., San Francisco; Dravo of Canada Ltd., Vancouver; Arundel Mica Construction Corp., Baltimore; Dixon Canada Inc., San Gabriel, Cal.; and Commonwealth Constructioon Co. Ltd. of Vancouver.

Forest Museum Wins Certificate

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum was awarded a certificate here Wednesday for being one of the top 15 nominees in Park and Tilford's recent province-wide community beautification competition.

Supervisor of public relations for the company, William Bird, told Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce guests at a luncheon that Victoria's Nootka Court was the regional winner while the Courtenay Civic Centre was also a finalist in the Vancouver Island region.

There were 136 nominations in the competition from all major cities throughout the province.

The museum was recognized for its contribution to the valley as a recreation area and a community project.

In the nomination, the chamber described the 40-acre site as one "which has been developed to accentuate the historic aspects of the forest industry, and to make visitors aware also of the present and future needs of Canada from the continuity of the forest industry."

Thom's Fashions Ltd. received recognition for rebuilding its premises in downtown Duncan while the city of Duncan was awarded a certificate for its new senior citizens and library complex.

Two special awards were presented from the chamber.

Doreen McIntyre, who has been Cowichan United Appeal secretary for the past three years, was given a lifetime membership in the chamber for her service to the community.

Commander Guy Windeyer and his wife, Irene was given a special certificate of appreciation for "thinking beyond themselves."

The meeting was told that, although Windeyers could have received a good price for their Somenos Farm commercially, they held out and let it be bought under the Provincial Green Belt Act which means the land will be retained in its present form.

Series 44—the Panasonic answer to the 4-channel puzzle

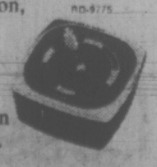
Everyone agrees there's a great future ahead for 4-channel sound...but nobody's quite so sure about the present. Until now. Panasonic Series 44 gives you Discrete, the pure 4-channel system...plus the ability to play Matrix and Enhanced Stereo, too. You get the most advanced 4-channel sound, and the assurance that you can play other material that comes your way...including conventional stereo, and monaural.

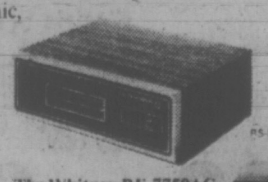
The Holbrook SE-4040C An FM/AM/FM stereo radio with a 4-channel 8-track cartridge player and stereo phono. The radio has ITL-OTL-OCL and solid-state circuitry, for distortion-free sound. Cartridge player accepts 4- or 2-channel tapes. The changer has a Magnistate cartridge and diamond stylus. 48 watts PMP.

Just say Panasonic Series 44. Then you're sure of all the 4-channel music, even if you don't know all the 4-channel words.

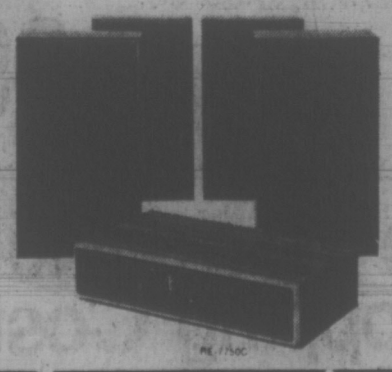
Whether it's called Quadruplex, Quadraplex, Quadrasonic, Quadraphonic, Quatrosonic, Matrix, Discrete... Panasonic Series 44 is capable of playing them all. It's the only 4-channel sound system with an assured future.

Here are three ways of enjoying Panasonic Series 44 sound. All play Discrete 4-channel material, through 4 separate amplifiers. They also play Matrix material, and, with Quadruplex™ circuitry, can create 4-channel sound presence from conventional 2-channel stereo, so you can still enjoy your record and tape collection. All have advanced solid-state circuitry, with FET tuners for precise tuning, AFC on FM, and integrated circuitry. All have loudness control, tone control, inputs and outputs for accessories, including a multiplex output for future 4-channel FM, and a very interesting Panasonic option, provision for the RD-9775 remote balance control, which lets you balance the 4 speakers to your taste from the actual listening position. All come with four 6½" air-suspension speakers, for improved bass response.

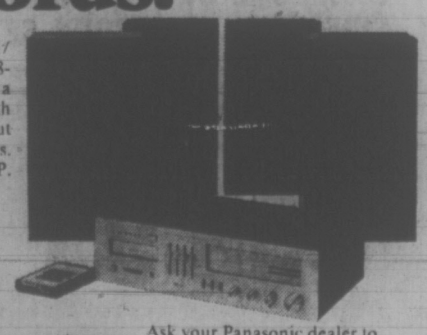




The Whitney RE-7750AC An FM/AM/FM stereo radio with Series 44 4-channel circuitry. Levels are set by individual slide levers. 40 watts Peak Music Power. Add The Lauderdale RS-845US and you can play either 8-track stereo cartridges or 4-channel cartridges.



The Whittier RE-8420C An FM/AM/FM stereo radio with a 4-channel, 8-track cartridge player built-in. It's a strikingly handsome unit, with champagne-gold fascia and walnut wood cabinetry and enclosures. 40 watts PMP.



44 series

Ask your Panasonic dealer to demonstrate just how good Discrete 4-channel sound can be on Panasonic Series 44 equipment. We know you'll be impressed.

Labor Raps 'Elitists' On Minimum Pay Raise

Opposition critics of the new provincial government's move to raise the minimum wage in stages to $2.50 an hour in 18 months were rapped by Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night.

Neil Hindle of the Boilermakers' Union said he is appalled to see "this elitist group in the house" say that such a move is inflationary.

He singled out Conservative house leader Dr. G. Scott Wallace and Liberal leader David Anderson, "so quick to flail at the poor people who will receive $2.50 in 18 months."

He said the government is to be commended for helping people "who have been at the short end of the stick for so long. This money will go right back into the economy. The ones at the top of society are the ones ready to cut the working poor's throat."

But Larry Tickner of the Carpenters' Union predicted the minimum wage increase will result in layoffs although he added that poor wages encourage inefficient operations."

He criticized the New Democratic Party because it had promised $2.50 an hour immediately, which now turns out to be 1974.

"This doesn't seem very immediate and it will be worth what $1.50 is now," he said.

The council also voted to regret "scare tactics" of some politicians regarding takeover of utilities.

Hindle said reaction to the possible takeover of B.C. Telephone is "more detrimental" than a takeover, which has been indicated as a low priority of the new government.

Hospital Controls Endorsed

Victoria Labor Council voted Wednesday night to support Health Minister Dennis Cocke in having more rigid controls and more frequent inspections of private hospitals.

The action followed newspaper reports indicating this will be done by the health department.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said there had been a controversy over inspections at Sandringham Private Hospital.

While not all private hospitals and rest homes are bad, "there are some black holes of Calcutta" and the labor council had an obligation "to be vigilant."

Neil Hindle of the boilermarkers' union said he hoped he wasn't going to scare the stock market, but this area of health care "should be within the community."

Another delegate, Darrell Walker, also of the boilermakers, said private hospitals "should be run by the province, not for profits," and he hoped the provincial government will take over all of them.

Royal Roads To Celebrate Anniversary

Royal Roads Military College will mark its 30th anniversary Nov. 11, with a parade of the Cadet Wing at 10 a.m. and dedication of a memorial to graduates who gave their lives on active service.

Chief Justice J. O. Wilson, administrator on behalf of the Crown, will be guest of honor at the anniversary activities and all former cadets, students and staff of the college and their families are invited to attend.

Missing Manager Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — A warrant has been issued by city police for the arrest of Philip Sidney Smith, 40, former assistant manager of the B.C. Teachers' Credit Union, on charges of theft and fraud totalling $64,000.

Charges were laid after Smith did not return to work Sept. 21 after lunch and auditors who went over credit union books allegedly found discrepancies totalling $64,000. It is believed he may be in England.

Department Blamed

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A preliminary report by an engineering firm blames the highways department for a flood last July 7 which damaged about 100 properties.

"We believe the flooding was caused by the highways department construction, during which several creek channels and culverts were in the process of being constructed," said the report by Dayton and Knight Ltd., released Tuesday by Mayor Art Langley.

Hunter Dies

QUESNEL (CP) — Neil Harold Hayward, 18, of Quesnel died in hospital Wednesday from a bullet wound in the head.

Police said he was shot with a .22-calibre revolver Tuesday, apparently by accident, when he and two companions were returning from a hunting trip.

Coroner C. C. Beath has ordered an inquiry but no date has been set.

Negligence Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gary Edward Smith, 34, of Vancouver, was fined $1,250 Wednesday after being convicted in B.C. Supreme Court of criminal negligence and impaired driving in an incident in a North Vancouver beer parlor in which Ronald Woods of North Vancouver suffered loss of a leg.

Court was told that Smith — who said he did not know how to drive and did not have a driver's licence — went drinking with a friend and drove the friend's car around the parking lot, striking Woods' car as he was entering it and hitting three other cars. Smith was also prohibited from driving for three years.

Attitudes Important

DELTA (CP) — The attitude of the public is the most important factor in formulating and implementing policies on preservation of Fraser Valley farmland, speakers at a meeting on land use agreed Wednesday.

Mayor Doug Taylor of Matsqui told the meeting people are becoming less concerned about loss of farmland to urban use in the face of apparently inevitable spread of urban centres.

"Perhaps we are fighting a rearguard action," he said. "But I can't accept that in any way, shape or form."

Robert Franson, assistant professor of law at UBC, said the reason for urban sprawl in the Fraser Valley is "simply because that's what most

And for the Cadets, Quick March Down Road

'Can Scott Assure Me There'll Be No War?'— Mayor Pollen

If most local politicians had their way cadets at Royal Roads Military College would be marching down the road to another school site, leaving the academy's magnificent parkland by the sea open to the public.

One federal candidate called the idea a "Liberal plot" of the press but the majority said they favored the suggestion by Times' columnist Jack Scott that a public park be established on the 650-acre college site.

★

"It's a wonderful idea," Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst said, "we want to get public control of the waterfront hopefully all the way around to William Head."

Capital Regional Board chairman Hugh Curtis agreed that the idea was a gool one, but, like most of those questioned, said he wouldn't want to see the college closed.

"It gets my approval," he said, "on the condition that the military finds another location for the school.

"The college fits in with Victoria's general image," Curtis added, "of being a centre of government, armed forces and educational institutes."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen voiced even stronger disapproval over the aspect of closing the school:

"It may seem pretty expensive to have 250 cadets there," he said, "but it's cheap in the event of war.

"If Mr. Scott can assure me there'll be no war, then I'll agree."

Pollen agreed it was a fast-growing residential area and Royal Roads might serve as a good recreational centre but said there were more important priorities to face such as the need for industrial sites.

★

"We could use our money better elsewhere," he said, "but if the federal government wants to make it a park that would be great."

"It's a motherhood issue," Pollen added.

Federal candidates in Victoria Allan McKinnon and Dan Heffernan both said the park idea is excellent, provided a suitable new location was found for the training school.

"I agree there's a lot of parkland there not needed for Royal Roads," McKinnon said, "and they could probably train elsewhere in Esquimalt."

"There's lots of room to incorporate it with the CFB base," Heffernan said.

"It's a heck of a good idea," Victoria Independent candidate Michael Hallpatch commented, "maybe the college could be moved to combine with the new world college to be established at Pedder Bay."

Not all the candidates agreed.

Liberal candidate David Groos, a former navy captain, said a great deal of the acreage is being used by the military establishment and the sort of land needed for a park could be found elsewhere.

★

"Until the armed forces decide Royal Roads is not required," Groos added, "there's no better way for the land to be preserved."

Groos agreed it would be sensible to make the land a park if Royal Roads is ever phased out.

"I certainly don't advocate closure of the school," Conservative Donald Munro said.

"It's serving a very useful purpose now," he said, "and it's open to the public for visits anyway."

Victoria Socred candidate Clifford Stretch also opposed the idea, saying the area should be kept as a training centre for civilians as well as the military.

"Our society needs more training schools," he said, "for civilian youths that have maybe fallen by the wayside.

"Maybe a portion could be used for recreation purposes but it should be basically a training and mental health centre to restore the strength and mentality of our youth."

★

Both NDP candidates supported Scott's suggestion.

"There's no reason why any training school should be on parkland like that," Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Roger Smith said, "the public should have access to it."

But Smith said he felt the physical plant of the college should be continued to be used as a training school.

"It's an ideal site for training fishermen and coast guard, etc.," he explained.

Flemming Hansen, NDP candidate for Victoria, said the idea sounded good but would require "an entirely new military policy on the part of the federal government."

Only one candidate refused to comment on the issue. John Tisdalle, Socred aspirant in Esquimalt-Saanich, said, "I don't see what this has to do with the election.

"Sitting in the pressroom he (Scott) can recommend any kind of Liberal machine politics he wants," Tisdalle said, "I don't see that I should comment on it."

Greenpeace Veteran Carries On

It turned out to be a one-man crusade by Dave Birmingham of Nanoose Bay — veteran of the Greenpeace missions to Amchitka — to make Canadians aware of the horrors of the Vietnam war.

Birmingham, centre, holding model of an anti-personnel bomb, is accompanied on the meandering trip through Western Canada as far as Winnipeg by his wife Deeno.

Lettering on the bomb reads: Fibreglass-replica-of-750-lb.-bomb used to devastate vast areas of Indochina resulting in bomb craters equivalent to a trench 30-feet deep and 40-feet wide round the circumference of the earth.

Rental Bureau Wins Backing of Aldermen

Victoria city council will be asked to establish a Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau and to finance its first year of operation under the Community Council of Greater Victoria, at a cost of $11,590.

But Ald. Alf Hood, the leading proponent of the scheme, told council's finance and legislative committee today that although Victoria is the sole backer the service cannot be confined to city limits.

As the Community Council, which will run the bureau, serves and is supported by the Greater Victoria area, "it would not be acceptable to restrict their activities in this new function," Hood stated in a report.

However, he assured aldermen detailed records will be kept during 1973 and, depending on the degree of use made of the bureau by the various parts of Greater Victoria, a further approach can be made to the Intermunicipal Committee for help in financing the operation.

Strongly urging establishment of the advisory bureau by bylaw, and approval of 1973 financing, Hood pointed out that the idea had been tossed around for almost a year.

Municipalities other than Victoria had shown a general reluctance to give their support, the proposal had gone back and forth to the Intermunicipal Committee and "we have gone around in a complete circle twice," he said.

"I don't think this can be deferred any longer."

Hood speculated that renters now account for something like 57 per cent of Victoria's population, and said a body to advise on all landlord-tenant matters and mediate in disputes was an urgent need.

Four organizations are now functioning in this field, the Greater Victoria Apartment Owners Association, the Rental Accommodation Advisory Bureau (carried over on a one-man voluntary basis from the original board set up by council), the Victoria Rental Aid Service and the Capital Region Tenants Association.

But Hood said none of these fulfil the functions of a properly-constituted advisory bureau.

Mayor Peter Pollen voiced strong support for the proposed bureau, saying it would in no way be an effort to "legislate rents" yet it would provide protection for such persons as tenants in apartments that came in for "wholesale purchase" who would be faced with massive rent increases.

As the provincial government had failed to take on the responsibility the city should not shirk it, he added.

Ald. Harold Olafson, the committee member to vote against the recommendation, said the functions of the bureau were definitely not the responsibility of a municipality.

The proposal to go before council sets out all the suggested aims and functions of the three-man bureau, consisting of one representative each of the landlords and tenants, and a chairman nominated by the Community Council.

The bylaw establishing the body, the recommendation says, should allow landlords to levy a security deposit of not more than half a month's rent.

Appeal Set For Young

A public hearing has been set for Nov. 28 in Campbell River for submissions in the appeal of radical school principal John Young against his dismissal by the Campbell River school board.

Victoria lawyer B. J. B. Morahan, 67, will chair the board of reference set up by the provincial government under legislation passed earlier this year for consideration of dismissal appeals by tenured teachers.

The hearing will be open to press and public in the manner of an appeal court, Morahan said today.

Submissions by counsel for Young and the school board will be heard at the Discovery Inn starting "between 9 and 10 a.m." Morahan said.

Davis Must Sign Disputed Bylaw

A B.C. Supreme Court judge has ruled North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis must sign a controversial bylaw paving the way for the Kingswood development.

Davis, who is out of town and could not be reached for comment, has refused to sign the bylaw since it was passed by a 5-2 vote of council last June.

He has repeatedly argued that council has not given sufficient consideration to the project, a view that the aldermen supporting the bylaw have consistently denied.

The bylaw will allow a land use contract to be negotiated for development of about 350 acres in North Saanich bounded by West Saanich and Wain Roads.

Property owner Geoffrey Ellis, who plans a development involving more than 300 homes and an 18-hole golf course, sought a writ of mandamus against Davis when the mayor continued in his refusal to sign the bylaw.

The ruling in favor of Ellis was handed down by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootten Wednesday. It followed a hearing held Sept. 19.

Prime Minister to Get 'The Tour'

The lack of easy access to Patricia Bay airport will be impressed upon the prime minister when he arrives next Tuesday for a major speech in the Royal Theatre.

Trudeau is expected to land in his special DC-9 jet with about 30 reporters and members of his staff at 3 p.m. after a flight from Saskatoon.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which has campaigned unsuccessfully at federal and provincial government levels for better road access to the airport, will make sure the prime minister is aware of the problem.

Chamber transportation committee director Jack McKernan said consideration is being given to some kind of visual display, but in any case Liberal candidates for the area who will be riding with Trudeau have assured McKernan they will draw attention to "that little country road" connecting the airport with the highway.

A motor cavalcade will carry the Trudeau party directly from the airport along Patricia Bay Highway to the theatre, where he is expected at 4:15. Mel Couvelier, who is handling the arrangements, said Trudeau's address is likely to be about 30 minutes long, enabling him to depart for Vancouver immediately.

Exact timing will depend upon travel arrangements in getting the prime minister here, the weather and other flying conditions.

When Trudeau came to Victoria to address a rally in Beacon Hill Park for the 1968 election he flew directly from Vancouver to the park by helicopter. Other trips are believed to have been by float plane, avoiding the airport.

Truck Leaves Road, Flips in Fog

A tractor trailer driven by Patrick Thompson, 26, of 4144 Wilkinson, jacknifed on the Pat Bay Highway early this morning in thick fog that has blanketed Southern Vancouver Island for two days.

No one was hurt when the large truck ran off the road but it was five hours before a crew using a crane towed the wrecked trailer away. The accident happened near Haliburton Road at 2:20 a.m.

Another accident in dense fog sent a man to Victoria General Hospital with minor injuries when two cars collided at 7:09 a.m. at the corner of Union and Quadra.

Fritz Benischek, 47, of 1219 Goldstream was admitted to hospital after his car collided with that of Edgar Vonkaldenberg, 62, of 10375 Wilson. Damages to Benischek's car were estimated by Saanich police at $1,000.

★ ★ ★

Both Saanich police and Colwood RCMP warned motorists that headlights are mandatory under the foggy driving conditions.

Colwood RCMP said the Malahat was "socked right in last night and is still socked in" this morning, with visibility reduced to 300 to 400 feet at times.

Air Canada's out-going morning flights were cancelled, and officials said the outlook was poor for afternoon flights.

Victoria Flying Service Ltd. cancelled its 8 a.m. flight out of the Inner Harbor, and its 1:30 p.m. flight was doubtful.

Several areas of Victoria and Saanich had a power blackout for 14 minutes this morning, from 4:50 to 5:04 a.m. A B.C. Hydro spokesman said weather conditions may have caused the fault in the power line between Esquimalt substation and Horsey substation.

B.C. Ferries boats and buses both reported they were running on schedule.

★ ★ ★

The fog should begin breaking up Friday, allowing a few sunny periods in the afternoon, the Victoria weather office predicts.

A new weather system moving down the coast will reach the city tonight, bringing with it clouds which will push the fog south, said weatherman Allan McQuarrie.

'Horse is at the Trough'

The Capital Regional District will be asked at its next meeting to approve a $3,000 study of drainage problems in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

In a recommendation, public works committee said it wanted to find a means of combatting problems in poor drainage areas.

But Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said it is time the area "incorporated and stopped hanging around the neck of the regional board."

Langford director Earl Pallister said a horse could be led to a trough, "but its head couldn't be stuck into it.

"Eventually we are going to be a municipality but the area won't be pushed," he said.

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

In the past year, more than 200,000 homes were built in Canada.

In this decade, two and a half million more homes will be constructed.

Despite these figures, Canada's housing crisis seems to be getting worse instead of better.

The 1968 Task Force on Housing, headed by Paul Hellyer, found that most Canadians want their own homes — and they want them single-family, ground level, private, with their own entrance and garden.

Yet a recent housing study indicates that by the end of this decade, 81 per cent of Canadians will be renters. Next to Ontario, British Columbia had the highest increase in renters — a 33 per cent rise, making for a total 244,765, according to the 1971 census figures — in the past five years.

Somewhere between the ideal white-fenced home sweet home and the growing inevitability of apartment living stands Mr. Average Canadian, looking for a place to call his own.

No Children

"There are (housing) opportunities available for any couple living modestly without children for three years," says Jack Betts, vice-president of the Victoria Real Estate Board.

"They could save as much as $10,000 and be able to buy any house they wanted," he adds.

For the immodest couple who dash into parenthood without three years' saving at $300 a month, buying a new home in Victoria is an expensive proposition.

The average Canadian salary now stands at $7,000 a year. As a conservative guide, you shouldn't pay more than two and a half to three times what you earn in a year on a mortgage. This means the mythical "average Canadian home" should cost $17,500.

Doesn't Exist

He estimates that it now costs around $15 a square foot to build a house in the Victoria area. Cost of a lot to put it on will be around $8,500. With most houses that get National Housing Act approval working out at 1,000 square feet or more, that gives a total cost factor per house of $23,500 for a two-bedroom structure with one and a half bathrooms.

"It's unlikely that you'll get anything new under $22,000 here," says Betts, "and even that is pretty basic — no fridge, range or fireplace."

A mortgage company or bank will lend 75 per cent of the purchase price to an accepted buyer. This is repayable, over 25 years, at $139.34 a month, at 9¼ per cent interest.

The balance, financed through a B.C. second mortgage, at 8¾ per cent interest, would cost another $41 a month, for a total of more than $180 a month, excluding taxes and insurance.

Mr. Average's $7,000-a-year salary gives him, his wife and two children under 16 approximately $504 a month after tax. After paying for the roof over their heads, the one-salary family would be left with $324 monthly to live on.

One alternative is to purchase an older home, with Central Mortgage and Housing Association finance.

The CMHA will give up to 95 per cent loan on an approved home. A $17,000 home in an area such as James Bay, with two bedrooms and one bathroom (no basement), financed for 25 years at 9¼ per cent, will cost $137.34 a month, with a down payment of $850. Taxes would then add another $300 gross a year, $185 of which is met through the homeowner's grant, leaving $120 a year to be paid by the owner.

On this basis, the $7,000-a-year man could comfortably afford his home, said a spokesman for the CMHA, which will take up to 30 per cent of a family's income into account when determining a home. The example quoted above means the head of the family pays out 23.3 per cent of his income on his 850 square feet of home.)

There is another alternative that may allow the one-salary family to buy new — the townhouse.

Three years ago, Doug Cowin and Norman Worsley, two consulting engineers in Victoria, bought $60,000 worth of apartment land in James Bay.

Cowin and Worsley took the land, planned for 30 apartment units, and built 14 townhouses on it. These they offered in 1969 at $17,900 for a two-bedroom unit, or $500 down and $136 a month.

The homes were carpeted, had appliances, ample cupboard space, laundry facilities, covered parking and a tastefully moden decor.

Now Rented

"After two months, we decided we'd have to rent them out," said Cowin this week.

"We set out to cater for the lower-income group," says Cowin of the James Bay experiment. Initially he and Worsley thought they were creating low-cost housing for older people who wanted a home near the downtown area.

"People said their furniture wouldn't fit in the rooms," said Cowin. Total floor area was 800 square feet, with a patio garden adding up to 1,100 square feet of living space. (Minimum residential housing floor space in Victoria for an area zoned R1B is 750 square feet, according to bylaws.)

Ironically, Cowin's James Bay scheme, which began as an attempt to sell less expensive housing to old people, is today occupied by younger families with children.

Bill Jorgensen, Victoria's deputy city engineer, says building habits — particularly those concerning the size of houses — have changed radically in the past 20 years.

"In the '50s, many builders questioned the need for houses to be as much as 750 square feet in area . . . now the average size is around 1,300 to 1,400 square feet."

As the pressure for bigger homes goes on, the number of single-family lots in the city of Victoria diminishes.

Jorgensen says there may be as few as 300 lots in the whole city that are suitable for single-family dwellings, but adds that rising land prices put them beyond the reach of most families.

"The bulk of our building permits in Victoria are for residential apartment and commercial developments," says Jorgensen.

Nightclub Discards Its 'Stripper Image'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

No more will tantalizing tassels twitch or pelvic pasties pulsate in downtown Victoria.

Gone are the bumps and grinds, the diaphanous garments provocatively discarded.

Gone, too — perhaps whence they came — are Miss Casey Champagne, The Exotic Sunni Daye, Miss Lottie from the Baby Grand Club, New York City, and Miss Bonnie Lee from the Band Box in Saigon.

The Harem Club, the nearest this unswinging city ever came to an honest-to-bareness strip joint, has closed its door for the last time.

But not, says owner Doug Wallace, because the club has gone belly-up for lack of customers — although he admits their numbers, like the girls' clothes, had been dropping off.

It's not so much straight-laced Victorian morality that killed the enterprise as Wallace's concern over the tawdry image it had been acquiring.

The Harem (was it accident or design that located it on Broad Street?) was being regarded around town as nothing more than a strip club, naked and unashamed.

Whereas it was never intended to be anything but a club offering cabaret with "exotic dancers," according to Wallace.

"The stripper image I feel, has detracted from the glamor of the club," he said. "I didn't care for the overall atmosphere that was developing."

At weekends there was a healthy turnout of couples, the sort of clientele he wanted to attract, but the rest of the time there wasn't quite such a desirable balance of the sexes.

Wallace never said so, but the vision conjured up was of bug-eyed males, bent on a little titillation to accompany their food and drink.

Now the stripping and the staring have ended. Wallace's nightclub reopens Friday under a new name, the King of Clubs, and to a new era of respectability.

She'd Make Canadians 'More Proud and Aware'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Flora MacDonald calls herself "antedated Women's Lib," which means she was concerned with women's rights long before the movement became fashionable.

"Discrimination in any area interests me," she said in an interview. "And when you're standing for public office there is no way you should or could represent just a special-interest group."

Miss MacDonald, a 46-year-old native of Cape Breton Island, N.S., in waging a vigorous campaign as Progressive Conservative candidate in the riding of Kingston and the Islands in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Flora MacDonald campaigns in Kingston

First Time

This is her first time as a candidate but Miss MacDonald is no stranger to politics. She has lived with them all her life.

"I can remember my parents discussing politics at the dinner table when I was a little girl. It wasn't so much partisan politics, either, since they were just as apt to vote for one side as the other."

She began to take an active part in 1956 when Robert Stanfield was campaigning to become premier of Nova Scotia. Since then she has more than held her own in the traditional male bastion of political organizing.

"When people have heard I've been involved in 29 election campaigns they think I'm a lot older," she said wistfully. "But that included federal and provincial elections and by-elections around the country."

Shortly after the 1956 Nova Scotia election, Miss MacDonald moved to Ottawa, where she was a powerful figure in Tory politics until John Diefenbaker, who was battling for his leadership, fired her in 1966.

She was one of the architects of Robert Stanfield's successful campaign for national leadership of the Conservative party in 1967 and then joined the political science department at Queen's University in Kingston.

In 1971 she was organizing again — this time for the Committee for an Independent Canada, a group which included prominent Canadians who oppose foreign domination of the Canadian economy.

When asked if it was in her power to change one single thing, Miss MacDonald said she would "make Canadians more Canadian, more proud and aware."

Urgent Need

"Everything else flows from that."

Then, she said, Canadians would see the urgent need for more secondary industry rather than tearing the country's resources out of the ground and sending them abroad to be processed.

One of the biggest disappointments of the campaign for her is that she is not running against E. J. Benson, former Liberal finance minister generally considered to be a disaster by members of the Committee for an Independent Canada. He announced his intention of retiring several weeks ago to become president of the Canadian transport commission. The Liberal nomination went to Dr. John Haslett, an orthopedic surgeon.

Flora does not believe that the fact she is a woman will cost her votes and said she expects as many people will vote for her because she is a woman as will vote against her for the same reason.

300 Women

"Since 1921, when Agnes MacPhail became the first woman in the House of Commons, there have been 12,000 candidates and only 300 have been women. And I don't think there have been any more than four women in the House at any one time since then."

Miss MacDonald stops short of discussing the possibility of her entering a Progressive Conservative cabinet should she and the party be successful Oct. 30, although at least one staff member predicts she'd be a shoo-in if it does happen.

"My job is to win the election and represent my constituency and that's a full-time job in itself," she said.

PARASITE INFECTION HARMS UNBORN BABY

TORONTO (CP). — Unborn babies may suffer serious injury if their mothers, during early pregnancy, pick up a parasite infection from cats, an American doctor warns.

Dr. John S. Reif said this week that the parasite, Toxoplasma, can cause brain damage or blindness in the baby. In an adult it may be mistaken for flu, although it can cause an eye infection.

Cats get the parasite from eating raw meat, mice or birds which are infected, said Dr. Reif, chief of epidemiology and public health at the University of Pennsylvania.

The cat excretes eggs of the parasite, which become infective in two to four days, he told the Toronto Academy of Medicine and the Academy of Veterinary Medicine.

Pregnant women should let their husbands take care of the cat's litter box, he said. Those who garden should wear plastic gloves.

He said cats won't get the disease if they are allowed to eat only canned meat or cat food and are kept away from mice or birds.

Dorothy O'Brien prepares Donald, Daphne for flight

A Free Ride South

BOSTON (AP) — Like most ducks, Donald and Daphne have gone south for the winter. Behind them this week they left their home pond in Massachusetts as the leaves turned gold and the weather cold.

Donald and Daphne aren't normal migrating ducks.

They took the wings of a commercial DC-9 and were flown to Florida in just under four hours, maybe the fastest migration in duck history.

"They're travelling first class," Dorothy O'Brien said as she watched her favorite ducks head south in a compartment of the plane's baggage section which was being warmed for them.

The flight was a happy ending to the love story of Donald and Daphne which has stretched across the ethnic lines of ducks.

At the centre of it all is Mrs. O'Brien, who followed the story of Donald and Daphne on a pond near her home in suburban Belmont.

Daphne is a crossbreed between a Pekin and a mallard and sufferes the troubles of the white, Chinese-bred ducks who are too large to be able to fly.

Because of the crossbreed, Daphne is not fertile, Mrs. O'Brien said, and because she is cinnamon-colored and partially resembles a mallard, the other Pekin ducks didn't care to socialize with her. "The white ducks wouldn't let her come near them last winter and she was all alone," Mrs. O'Brien said.

This spring, trouble developed when 10 male Pekins ganged up on four females on the pond near Mrs. O'Brien's home and killed them, leaving Daphne the only female in the crowd.

It was then that the other Pekins began to like Daphne, she said, because "at breeding time Pekins are not very particular."

Enter Donald, a wild mallard who can fly and who, Mrs. O'Brien said, became fond of Daphne.

"He courted the shy duck and finally won her," she said. "Then he protected her from the other ducks."

Then Donald was injured in a fight with a wild animal, so Daphne started keeping the other ducks away while he fed" and Donald recovered, Mrs. O'Brien said.

Despite the approaching cold winter, Mrs. O'Brien said Donald wouldn't obey his duck instincts and migrate because he wouldn't leave Daphne's side.

So a two-month campaign by Mrs. O'Brien ended Monday when Eastern Airlines agreed to give the lovers a free ride south for the winter.

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — A court decided a nude photograph that a 23-year-old woman took of herself was obscene. She was fined $133.

Blood Donors Below Target

With 132 donors Monday, the total stands at 240, 10 short of the objective for the first two days.

Clinics today through Friday are being held in the Student Union Building at the University of Victoria, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, Oct. 20, 1972
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go your own way at your own pace. Others may mean well, but they tend to interfere. Key now is to be analytical, to be a self-starter. Exercise caution where goals and contracts enter picture. Depend on your own judgment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Direct results may be delayed. Key is to outline plans, prepare format. Those who are impatient should be ignored. Obtain hint from Aries message. Look behind scenes. Find answers. Base information on factual material.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends may act in peculiar manner. You may be right, but not necessarily popular. If you want to win popularity contest, you may have to forego principles. Choice is your own. Review hopes, wishes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Set sights on goal. Accept responsibility. Relationships are intensified. Nothing now is apt to occur in lukewarm manner. What does happen is all or nothing. Know it and be prepared. Pay heed to older experienced individual.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Health improves. Confidence in basic abilities is on upswing. You gain as more persons become aware of intentions, abilities. Take special care with correspondence. Don't promise more than can be delivered.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take care with assets; avoid extravagance. New deal, fresh contacts, novel approach — these would be desirable. Let go of outmoded concepts. Move with the tide. Stress independence, original approach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lie low. Get second wind. Look to future. Don't brood about "what might have been." Prospects are brighter than you might imagine. Be aware of public relations, feelings of mate, partner. Time is on your side.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Horizons are broadened. Ideas can be developed. Basic chores are emphasized. You can clear away emotional debris. You will see more, do more and perceive potential. Social contact can prove meaningful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you build on solid base, success is assured. Aquarius and Leo individuals are involved. Don't permit emotions to overwhelm logic. Avoid basing actions on impulse. Opportunity is available. Grab it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Element of timing favors your efforts. You overcome obstacles. What appears to be roadblock is merely a temporary delay. Know it and respond accordingly. Be ready for change short journey and variety of experiences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Postpone journey, if practical. Source of information may not be reliable. Review of goals, directions is necessary. Take nothing for granted. Double check. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some of your natural qualities surge to fore — and are appreciated. You gain; assets could multiply. Key is to percive and to act on inner feelings. Maintain aura of mystery. Don't reveal all you know.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, able to feel pulse of public. Change made this month will prove beneficial. Obstacle to progress is due to be removed. You harmonize especially well with Cancer, Pisces persons.

Dog, Owner Killed

DEERFIELD, Mass. (AP) — John P. Murphy took his wheelbarrow before dawn on Monday and walked across a highway to pick up the body of his dog. It cost him his life. Police said Murphy, 73, was hit by an automobile and killed. They said Murphy's collie Tippy was struck by an automobile and killed Sunday night.

Cut-rate means cut corners on style, colour and size.

A little extra buys you the extra fashion details you want, whether it's all-nude, a better fit, the right shade, or a bikini panti top.

'Cause when you're going for a certain fashion look that must fit with the look you wear, it's no time to cut corners.

Price of Honesty

DEAR ABBY: The woman who wondered whether she was "Honest or Stupid" for returning that which she had found, was obviously disgruntled because no rewards were offered.

If one expects to be rewarded for honesty, it means that honesty today is a rarity, and I don't believe it.

A number of years ago I was stranded in a town after having lost my wallet. A bellhop paid my hotel bill plus breakfast, and when I obtained cash by wire to send me on my way, I left a repayment plus a reward for his kindness to me.

When I returned home I found a letter with the reward money returned to me from the bellhop, stating there was no price on his friendship to man. I was deeply moved by his action and shall never forget it.—H. A. L.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning rewards for being honest: I was raised on a farm by a father who didn't spare the rod, and I thank God for him every day of my life. When other kids were being rewarded for being "good," my father used to say, "It's not what you'll get if you're GOOD, it's what you'll get if you're NOT GOOD you ought to worry about." 84-Year-Old

Tasks for Large-Sized Children (Age 10-13)

In my last two columns, I dealt with chores suitable for small (three to five-year-old) and middle-sized (six to nine-year-old) children. Today we are going to look at chores for large-sized (10 to 13-year-old) children.

Unfortunately, large-sized children do not have much time for chores. But in the odd moments when they are not practising the bassoon or determining how long it will take an airplane flying at 600 m.p.h. into a 50 m.p.h. headwind to fly from Cedar Rapids to Bombay, they may be induced to:

1. Mow the lawn. Regrettably, the only children who are really keen to mow lawns are middle or little. Letting a middle or little struggle with the lawnmower will cause the neighbors to report you to the welfare authorities as being unfit parents. But by the time a child reaches a size where the neighbors begin to say, "Why doesn't that big lout of a kid next door ever do any work?" he will be completely disenchanted with the thrill of mowing. He will insist that he is not big enough to mow the lawn and will lop off his big toe just to prove it.

2. Set and clear the dinner table: While this may work admirably if your cuisine lends itself to plastic plates and jelly glasses, I would be a bit loath to entrust a handful of heirloom Limoges to anyone who has been known to trip over a piece of lint on the carpet.

3. Take out the garbage: To be absolutely safe, it's best to add "and put it into the trash can." If your son is anything like mine, he may very well absentimindedly take the gargage to school and stuff it into his desk until lunchtime, when he will bring it home and deposit the bag in the kitchen again.

4. Clumb up on the roof and pry the frisbee out of the chimney: Of course, if you didn't have a large-sized child, you wouldn't have a frisbee in the chimney. But at this age, a chore is a chore.

TISDALLE: SC POLICY VITAL

motivated by "mostly personal grievances," adding: "I hate to say it, but they wanted things I wouldn't yield to."

If for no other reason, Tisdalle will be missed in the B.C. Legislature because he was, over the years, a steady source of amusement for MLAs of all parties.

Earlier this year he treated them to a lengthy, complex explanation of why the theory of evolution is no more scientific than other theories. On another occasion he lashed out at "pinkos" with all the gusto of a Tom Campbell.

Frequently he had to contend with uproarious heckling and goading but, in a perverse sort of way, he almost appeared to relish the laughter and his unofficial role as Jester in the Bennett Court.

The image was reinforced by his slightly Punch-like appearance, with high-domed forehead, hair that was often dishevelled and prominent nose.

Tisdalle laughs out loud at his own jokes, but insists it was no frivolous move on his part to enter the federal arena.

"This is no sideline, hobby or appendage to me. When people choose me to represent them I make it my business, it's not a sideline."

The central issue of his election, according to Tisdalle, is "straight fiscal policies," and Social Credit's answer is to inject adrenalin into the economy by making available at home the same long-term, low-interest loans which the Bank of Canada offers to developing nations such as Nigeria.

"Wouldn't you think that Canadians are equal with Nigerians?

"If we only used the policy for, say, housing — I just came over on the radio on this, it was a terrific blast . . . I'm glad they caught me, I was hot this morning — if we only considered ourselves equal with Nigerians, with three per cent interest for Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and made it an agency of the Bank of Canada, can you imagiine what would happen to housing?"

What would happen, Tisdalle claims, is a big surplus of housing with the dual benefit of keeping rents at a reasonable level and providing thousands of jobs.

The Socreds, too, would provide a guaranteed annual income not by "robbing the rich to give to the poor," but by "increasing the flow from the source, which is the Bank of Canada."

Back in the early months of 1968, Tisdalle was warning the B.C. Legislature and the rest of Canada to "look closely" at the writings of then Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau, whom he described as "a serious-minded socialist implanted in the ranks of the Liberal party."

Now, more than four years later, he says his warning was well founded — but adds with some relish that the press which created Trudeaumania then have "uncreated" it this time.

"Irrelevant" commissions. "The bilingual, bicultural one — I think they discovered that most of the people in Quebec spoke French and the rest of Canada spoke English. Then they decided to prove there was no difference between men and women, when most people were quite sure there was."

The LeDain Commission on the non-medical use of drugs: "Pure window dressing to get them (the federal government) off the hook. They hoped the commission would engineer consent, but the people rejected it."

But Tisdalle says what perturbs him is that Canadians appear ready to reject Trudeau in favor of someone they "regurgitated on" a few years previously.

"There's an old, old parable by a great teacher which says why should the dog return to its vomit or the pig to its wallow."

Depleted party funds allow only minimal advertising for Tisdalle, but he's campaigning strongly and says his 19-year record of provincial service "based on making decisions on what was right, not who was right," will stand him in good stead. Notwithstanding that the Socred candidate last time around polled only 700-odd votes.

Groos: Guardian of West Coast Ecology

was the "abusive" ones, phoned in at "two, three and four in the morning."

He adds, "Abusive language is fair enough with me — but not for my kids."

He explains that his answering service judges priorities. "If it's a matter of life or death — or a passport" they get in touch with him immediately. If not, it's the next day or the next one after that at the latest.

What has given him the most satisfaction during his nine years in politics?

Groos says it's what he's been able to do for veterans and "being able to maintain defence orientation through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

He's spent seven years on NATO's military committee and has been approached to stand for chairman when the committee meets in Bonn next month, provided, of course, he retains his seat.

He's particularly happy about what he achieved for the Hong Kong veterans. "They were not a major political force but they were a major national responsibility that was being overlooked."

The sobering facts of high unemployment figures and soaring food costs released by Statistics Canada, says Groos, prove that Statistics Canada "is not a tool of the Liberal government. They produce the truth even it it hurts."

Groos feels that the spiralling statistics could soon force government control of prices and incomes.

"In my own personal opinion," he says, "we are very close to it. If things go on this way there will be no alternative. But the public have a right to know before what the whole package means — ration cards, limiting the flow of capital out of the country, stopping travel abroad. We may have to direct money into certain industries."

Asked if the recent wage increase for the armed forces was politically timed, Groos says no. He says the increases are to bring armed forces' wages in line with private industry.

He dodges the question whether armed forces' morale has suffered through unification, saying he'd rather not comment on that one.

Enunciating his words slowly, he qualifies this.

He explains that now, with Paul Hellyer — instigator of unification — out of the government and running as a Conservative — would be a good time for a review of the situation.

"It's been in operation about five years. There are retired officers and individuals still well-known and respected. They should be asked to report what's right and what requires correction."

He adds, "It's important to use on an investigation board people who didn't take a strong stand one way or another."

He defends the government's policy of allowing companies to withhold taxes on the principle that the money will be plowed back into capital investment, creating more jobs.

"The philosophy behind this," he says, "is that the Liberal party is the party of private enterprise and private enterprise can create jobs more quickly and efficiently than the government."

How about jobs?

Admitting he expects a closer fight this election, Groos says he's relying on "the people I've worked for and tried to help and people concerned about the special ecology problems we have here."

What if he loses?

"Some day I'll stand on the beach at Willows, wallowing in oil, knowing that it's not my responsibility, knowing I've done what I could."

Rehabilitation Offered Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Acting "somewhat" prematurely, the federal government has announced proposals to rehabilitate an elderly section of Ottawa's Lower Town.

Finance Minister John Turner, a candidate for re-election in Ottawa-Carleton, announced the plan Wednesday.

Speaking on behalf of Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford, he said the proposal cannot be considered an "election goodie."

He gave no details of cost or timetables.

Douglas Fullerton, chairman of the National Capital Commission which put forward the plan, said the proposals were brought out in a "somewhat premature stage" to permit discussion by local officials.

"This has been a declining part of the capital and in order to stop it declining, something dramatic was needed, and something fast was needed."

The NCC proposal calls for a hotel, new federal offices, shopping malls, cultural facilities and mixed housing development.

Transport Pollution Compensation Eyed

LONDON (AP) — The British government plans to introduce legislation to ease the plight of citizens whose lives are polluted by advancing transport technology.

Legislation outlined Tuesday will provide compensation for persons who suffer when new highways and airports are built near their homes.

The bill, which will be put before Parliament soon, looks to be a triumph for environmentalists. It should make it cheaper and more convenient for road planners to skirt builtup areas rather than bulldoze through them.

Until now, the only persons compensated when a new highway or airport was built were those whose homes were actually torn down to make way for the developments.

The proposed legislation now recognizes that those who have to live next to the noise and dirt that transport hauls in its wake also are entitled to protection.

DETAILS GIVEN

The "new deal" was detailed in a government white paper called, "Putting People First," and a simultaneous report, which the government has accepted, of Britain's urban motorways committee.

The white paper provides for compensation for "injurious affection." This benefits those who live near enough a new road or runway to suffer, but who do not lose their homes.

It allowed home owners free sound insulation as a right. It will be provided for living rooms and bedrooms when traffic noise rises above stipulated levels.

It also gives money to those forced to leave their homes over and above the compulsory purchase price now paid. Houseowners will be given up to £1,500 if they are deprived of homes they have lived in for seven years or more. And they will be given a statutory right to be rehoused at equivalent standard.

The compensation program is expected to cost the government between £60 and £70 million a year.

The legislation will contain provisos for compensation to be backdated to 1969 to cover people whose way of life already has been blighted by the rapid spread of superhighways, mainly in London and Birmingham.

Treaty Ends 23-Year Vendetta

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Two wealthy Brazilians signed a treaty Tuesday agreeing to end a 23-year-old Vendetta that has taken 10 lives in northeast Brazil.

Jose Aires de Alencar and Jose Sampaio signed the pact in the presence of an army representative, Lt.-Col. Ivo Barbosa. The army intervened after pacification efforts by police and the state governor failed.

The feud between the Alencar and Sampaio families began in 1949 in Exu, a little town of less than 5,000 people in the interior of Pernambuco state. Jose Aires de Alencar shot and killed Ramao Sampaio Filho, a member of a rival political party.

Within hours, Sampaio's son Aristides, with the help of a friend, killed Jose Aires' father.

Through the years the family war raged. It became increasingly difficult to determine who should be killed in revenge for whose death because both families also took on hired gunmen.

In desperation, after two hired gunmen killed a Sampaio May 5, the governor of Pernambuco fired Exu's entire police force and sent a contingent of state police into the town. But the two families were warming up their political machines for municipal elections in November, and June 18 an Alencar was killed.

Sept. 11, two Alencars killed a Sampaio in a restaurant in front of his wife and two sons. Two days later one of the Alencars was killed from ambush.

The army stepped in, and Col. Barbosa got the heads of the feuding clans together in the neutral town of Garanhuns. In the document they signed, the families agreed not to run for public office and that all persons involved in fatal shootings would stay away from Exu forever.

Jobless, Spending Linked

WASHINGTON (WP) — The congressional joint economic committee was told Tuesday that the U.S. unemployment rate will stay well over five per cent for the next two years if the Nixon administration makes the cuts it has proposed in government spending.

Testifying that "the economy needs, not one more good year, but two," Harvard economist Otto Eckstein told the committee that it is too early, that the unemployment rate is still too high, to cut back federal spending or increase federal taxes.

Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern has been voicing similar expansionary sentiments in recent months. The White House, by contrast, has been arguing that the greater danger is inflation, and that there is now a need to hold down spending.

Priest Sentenced

SAIGON (AP) — A military court has sentenced a Roman Catholic priest to five years' imprisonment and a fine of $75,000 for printing articles considered "Communist propaganda and detrimental to the national security." The sentence given Rev. Chan Tin, 57, on Tuesday is the maximum under the new press decree issued by President Nguyen Van Thieu in early August. Father Tin could have the case reconsidered if he paid the fine but said today he would not do so.

'Silent Women' Voter Issue

By PIERRE BELLEMARE

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec has never sent a woman to the House of Commons but the long-standing tradition has a good chance of falling in Louis-Hebert riding in the Oct. 30 federal election.

All four national parties have chosen women candidates and a fifth is running for the newly-formed Parti Parti.

Women became eligible to run in federal elections in 1921. Three ran that year and 68 have entered this year's election.

Three of the candidates feel the time has come to jump into the political arena where questions of abortion and divorce must be resolved. They say they want to defend the interests of their co-citizens, especially those of "silent women."

The first to be nominated was a business woman, Cecile Bergeron, a Progressive Conservative who would like to follow in the footsteps of her father, Dr. J. E. Bissonnette, who represented the old riding of Quebec West as a Conservative from 1958 to 1962.

The Liberals, who have held the riding since 1962, countered with their candidate, Sillery city councillor Albanie Morin.

Jean-Charles Cantin, now Canadian consul in Louisiana, won the riding for the Liberals in 1968 with a 22,000-vote majority.

The other women contesting the riding are Francoise Stanton, New Democratic Party candidate; Ghislaine Clavet, under the Social Credit banner, and Lise Pouliot, the Parti Parti candidate.

Conscious of her party's strength in the riding, Mrs. Morin nevertheless refuses to be over-confident, saying she is aware that there are 20,000 new voters in the riding.

All the women candidates say they place their hopes on these new electors—mainly young people. Laval University, with a student population of about 12,000, is located in the riding.

SURPRISED BY WELCOME

Mrs. Stanton of the NDP said she was given a surprisingly sympathetic welcome by students.

She describes herself as a mother, a grandmother and a "woman who has a right to her opinions and wants to make the population aware of the New Democratic cause."

Mrs. Pouliot, mother of two young boys, the Parti Parti candidate, will have no affiliation listed on the ballot because her party is running only two candidates.

The Parti Parti emerged last week, calling itself a dissident Quebec City branch of the Montreal-based Rhinoceros Party. Both parties are spoofs of the traditional political parties.

The Parti Parti has fielded a second candidate in Levis and says it will demand a recount if its candidates are elected.

Mrs. Pouliot, who has no political experience, said she simply wants to profit from this "funny" experience.

Miss Clavet, the Social Credit candidate, is a pretty blonde hairdresser from a working-class district. She realizes her chances are limited but is looking forward to the "challenge."

New Chief Socially Oriented

New Camosun College student council president Mark Holland says his job during the next year will be to improve the social side of life for students at the new college.

"We have an excellent academic course at the college and the students are generally happy, but as you'd expect at a new institution there is quite a lot to do on the social side."

Holland, born in Ontario, resident of Victoria since he was 12, is the son of a college course counsellor. He is the college's second student council president.

"I'm no radical," he said Wednesday. "I believe in the right to demonstrate if the normal channels don't respond. I am not a communist."

One of the first things on Holland's agenda is to work out a policy which will affiliate Camosun studets with University of Victoria students in social and educational pursuits.

Then students are pressing for a bar at the college, and a better cafeteria. Sports also needs improvement, Holland said.

Students pay $5 each semester. The fee brings them a student card with its privileges, and the balance goes into a fund which at present stands "between $6,000 and $8,000," according to Holland.

Liberal Leaders Hold Confidence

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

However they vote on election day, about a third of the Canadian voters hold that the Liberal Party has the best leaders. Conservatives obtain less than half this rating — 14%, while almost as many,(11%) think that the NDP leaders are tops. For one in 10 voters ,there is no difference between the parties in their quality of leadership, while almost three in 10 (28%) are unable to make a choice.

In the nation's largest cities, Liberals hold a more than three to one lead over the Conservatives on this question, reaching a 38% ratio, compared to the PC's 11% selection. Liberals maintain a wide lead in all population segments, but it narrows through the smaller centres. In mediun-size cities (from 10 to 100 thousand population) it is twice that of the PCs. In villages and towns, and in the rural areas it is a less than two to one lead.

These facts were revealed in a study taken a month ago, on September 16, 18 and 19, with a random sample of 741 adults, during interviews in households carefully selected to represent the nation as a whole. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a 4% margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

The question:

"Which federal party do you yourself think has the best leaders?"

The tables below shows the national viewpoint, as compared to those in big and mediun-size cities, towns and villages, and rural areas.

NATIONAL	35%	14%	11%	2%	10%	28%
Big cities (over 100M)	38	11	13	1	7	30
Medium cities (10-100M)	33	17	7	4	10	29
Towns, villages (1-10M)	36	23	5	4	13	19
Rural areas	29	16	11	2	13	29

Slide at End —Money Men

Victoria investment managers are generally confident the sharp slide in B.C. stock prices is nearing an end.

Election of the NDP and takeover statements by Premier Barrett have contributed to a loss of some 12 per cent in total value of the shares of the major British Columbia firms listed on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Total paper loss since the Aug. 30 election is more than $450 million, with $30 million erased from B.C. Tel shares alone.

Premier Barrett has said he definitely will take over the company.

On election day B.C. Tel shares were selling for $64.50 and by mid-morning today the price was $55, a total decline of $9.50 per share or $30,747,937.50.

The word on B.C. Tel shares in Victoria investment houses was "hold!"

Going by the experience of the provincial government takeover of the B.C. Electric, the shareholders who held on the longest gained the most. Investors who sold on takeover rumors got about $36 per share while those who held on were awarded $41.88 per share by the courts.

Most of the selling pressure is reported in Toronto and New York, although some of those selling on the Toronto Stock Exchange live in B.C.

W. J. Cathro, assistant manager of Richardson Securities Ltd., said his firm is urging clients to hold on to B.C. tel shares because most dealers believe the courts will value the share above the current selling price of $55.

L. B. Williams, manager of Pitfield Mackay Ross Ltd., called $55 a "give - away price."

"B.C. Tel is a good company. The takeover bid would have to go to the courts. Besides, the takeover is years away," Williams said.

He said the price may still go lower and, if it did, it would become a very attractive bargain.

James Bassett, manager of Midland Osler Securities Ltd., said strong emotions had briefly taken hold of the market and it might take some time for confidence to return.

"The past month has been a difficult time for investors and anyone else connected with the market," he said.

However confidence could be restored to the market once investors begin buying up B.C. stocks at what may be bargain prices.

On the political front, Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative candidate Don Munro said NDP policies were injuring Canadian investors.

He said the federal NDP attacks foreign investment while in B.C. the policies of the provincial NDP government reduce the savings of Canadian investors.

Slash Burners Face Suits

Legal action against logging companies who contravened slash-burning regulations on Vancouver Island is being considered by the B.C. Forest Service, a spokesman said today.

At least two forest fires were caused by slash-burning on south Vancouver Island last weekend, he said. One occurred in the Sooke area and the other in the Lake Cowichan district.

Water bombers were used to extinguish one fire, he said.

"I don't know the extent of the damage yet," he said. "But the fires did cause concern to the forest district and it is now considering legal action against the companies."

Northern Growth Needs Care, Not Ban

MONT GABRIEL, Que. (CP) — The pace of development in the North should be careful and controlled but it should not be stopped altogether, Dr. O. M. Solandt said Wednesday.

Dr. Solandt is chairman of a special advisory science conference for the federal government.

Speaking at the conclusion of the four-day meeting of 100 top-level industry, government Solandt said the question of the rate of development in the North had not been resolved at the meeting.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, a resources group has issued what amounts to a go-slow call on the government in an effort to stimulate debate on the proposed Mackenzie pipeline in the federal election campaign.

The group, Canadian Arctic Resources Committee, called Wednesday for full public hearings here and in the North on all government plans for a corridor up the Mackenzie River in the Northwest Territories.

That would only be a first step in a process that would lead to parliamentary action and formation of national policies on energy, resources and the North and establishment of environmental standards.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald has forecast that the National Energy Board will receive an application from a consortium desiring to build the $5-billion natural gas pipeline about the end of the year.

If recommendations of the committee were followed that application would have to be put off for some time.

The committee is a group of 28 persons from the professions, business and northern native people groups that seeks to act as an "honest broker" between government and people.

At the science conference the views ranged from find university scientists, Dr. those who wanted complete stoppage of energy development to those who wanted present resources used immediately before new energy sources were developed, he said.

"I favor a middle course. The world is preparing to face the fact that we can't continue to grow at the present rate."

The scientists met in six groups during the four days to discuss research and science activities pertaining to northern natives, environment, renewable and non-renewable resources, technology and international research.

During Wednesday's final sessions, reports advising on activities were submitted from the six groups. These will be combined and submitted to the cabinet.

In his summary, Dr. Solandt said the groups apparently had reached agreement on two major areas. One was the need to involve Indian and Eskimos in all phases of northern development.

The conference also had agreed on the need for a data bank where information about the North would be collected and kept for use.

Hijacker's Defence 'Not Valid'

SEATTLE — Frank Markoe Sibley Jr., who said he commandeered a United Air Lines jet Aug. 18 to protest against the Vietnam war, was found guilty Wednesday of air piracy.

Sibley faces a possible life sentence.

The jury deliberated less than 50 minutes after U.S. District Judge Morell Sharp told them a "good motive" was not a valid defence. The trial lasted three days.

Sibley's lawyer, Irving Paul, had argued that Sibley believed his actions were proper in protesting against U.S. involvement in Indochina.

Sibley testified he felt that seizing control of the aircraft by threat of force did not constitute hijacking because it was done to protect the bill of rights.

DES MOINES, Iowa — A Jehovah's Witness filed suit Wednesday to obtain unemployment benefits after quitting her job because, she said, she was asked to make peace sign molds.

Mrs. Betty Curtis left her job at the Foam Molding Corp. March 8, contending that making the molds was against her religious beliefs. She charged the peace symbol was "Communist inspired and of pagan origin" and contended that helping manufacture the "idolatrous designs" violated her religious rights.

TOKYO — The Imperial Household Agency said today Emperor Hirohito probably will decline an honorary degree which the faculty of San Francisco State University wants to give him.

An agency spokesman said this would be done because of fears of similar degrees from other universities were declined in the past. He did not identify the universities.

BATAVIA, N.Y. — When the art exhibit was over at Genesee Community College, workmen took the art treasures to a loading dock. Among them were statues by sculptors Victor Cecere and Henry Yasses. By and by, garbage collectors came along and took from the loading dock everything they considered refuse. That included the statues.

Cecere and Yasses said they each want the city to pay them $275 reimbursement.

TROCHTELFINGEN, Germany—A masked man walked into a bank Wednesday and demanded its money. "No, we don't have any," an employee standing behind a bullet-proof window told him.

MIAMI BEACH — Larry Capune, who paddled an 18-foot board 2,400 miles from Boston to Miami Beach, rested in a hotel today with local tourist promoters picking up the tab. He ended his 110-day trip Wednesday afternoon with only $4.95 remaining from the $400 he started out with July 1 from Boston.

Explaining why he spent 8½ to 12 hours a day paddling and kicking his specially designed 89-pound paddleboard along the Atlantic coast, the 30-year-old Capune said he hoped to turn kids away from drugs to adventure in the great outdoors.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Sandy Duncan, 25, who stars in her own television series, was granted an uncontested divorce Wednesday from actor Bruce Scott Zahariades, 26, ending four years of marriage.

The couple's holdings were divided. They have no children.

LONDON — British Opposition Leader Harold Wilson, who has pledged to renegotiate Britain's entry terms into the European Common Market, was re-elected unopposed Wednesday as head of the Labor party.

Civil Servant Wins Suit for Late Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Kenneth Eaton, a labor department economist, has become the first federal public servant to successfully sue the government for being late with his salary.

The Federal Court of Appeal Tuesday upheld a lower-court ruling ordering the government to pay him $50 for damages.

Dr. Eaton was one of many civil servants who received retroactive pay raises in 1969 but who did not get their cheques within the 90-day legal limit.

Thus, the pay raise put him in a higher tax bracket for the year and he had to pay increased income tax before he actually received the increased pay. That was the reason for the $50 award.

SUDS SALE COSTLY

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — It's costly to advertise if you want to sell a little extra beer, a 20-year-old Waterloo man found Wednesday.

George MacPherson told an arresting policeman that he put up a sign saying: Three beers for $1 on his apartment door because he wanted to make a little extra money.

Not only did he lose $4.50 in profits from the sales, but he was fined $50 or five days in jail in Waterloo Court Wednesday.

He pleaded guilty to keeping liquor for sale.

Judge John F. McCormick said he could not understand why the youth advertised his illicit business.

"Didn't you think the police would see your signs?" he asked.

Transplanting Shrubs Needs Care, Planning

The golden days of the past week have created inspiration enough to move plants around from where they already grew to where they might be more effective.

It is by living with plants that we come to know their worth in terms of foliage color or texture, or flower form or color.

Careful gardeners can move plants without a setback being experienced. The method aims at not allowing the root hairs to dry out in sun or wind, so that a decision on where the plant is to go must be arrived at before lifting the plant.

Prepare the new hole first, though you'll not know the exact size of the rootball until the plant is out of the ground. However, the finishing touches of enlargening or filling can be quickly enough done. If the soil is dry, as it may well be, pour in some water around the roots when the hole is halfway filled.

The golden privet, allowed to grow without shearing, has the appearance of a flowering shrub in winter from a short distance. It is easily controlled as it grows tall by removing the longest branches for indoor decoration. Try it against dark brown woodwork or drapes.

The green and gold of Elaeagnus pungen aureo maculata is still high on the list of variegated evergreen shrugs, from the second or third year in your garden, it will put on a foot of new growth each year.

You must watch for shoots bearing all green leaves. Cut them off promptly right at the source on the main branch, for this lovely shrub is what is called a "bud sport" and may revert to the green type if it is allowed to grow unnoticed and unchecked.

If you have these or similar outstanding shrubs, but in positions where you hardly notice their presence, move them now.

Perhaps you can also find better locations for favorite perennials, such as hostas for their fine foliage all summer. They do well with a minimum of water in shade, but are alright in sun if provided with a moisture holding soil. Move them now if you like.

In fact, within reason a careful gardener can play checkers (or hop scotch) with plants while they are in the small growth stages. Usually the benefit is mutual — the gardener learns about plants, and the plants frequently gain advantages from improved conditions.

With new plants you buy this fall, don't feel they must stay forever where you first put them. Unless you are an expert in design, you are likely to be moving some of them around in a year or two.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

To the true bridge devotee, contract bridge is, in the words of the late Somerset Maugham, "the most entertaining and intelligent card game that the wit of man has so far devised." While a game is in progress, it has become the most important thing on earth, and the devotee's immersion in it is total.

A bridge fanatic was in an exciting game at his bridge club when word was brought to him that his home was on fire. He hurriedly finished the hand he was playing, and then said: "Sorry, fellows, it looks like I'll have to break up the game. Two more rubbers and I quit."

As an eample of the fascination and mental stimulation that is providedx by bridge, witness today's deal. In it there occurred as imaginative a bid as was ever made in any bridge game. The deal arose in the Masters Pairs Championship of 1952. Sitting South was William Hanna, of Los Angeles.

Neither vulnerable. North deals.

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 9 5
♡ J 7 2
◇ A K 9 6
♣ 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	7 ♣ (!)	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

North's opening bid of three notrump was a conventional bid, known in tournament circles as the "gambling three-no-trump opening." It deonated a long, solid, minor suit, with a little something on the outside. Hanna, in the South seat, felt that his side had a fighting chance to make a small slam. So he bid six no-

But when East doubled, Hanna was certain that East, who was on lead, had the ace and king of hearts. So Hanna elected to bid seven clubs, knowing that North had a solid minor suit, which had to be clubs since it couldn't be diamonds. East doubled this bid also.

With South now becoming the declarer, West was put on lead. He thought long and hard about what to lead — and finally chose a spade. As is evident, South romped in with all 13 tricks. Had West guessed to lead a heart, declarer would have gone down three tricks, since West would have been able to ruff the third heart lead.

If there is any moral to this deal, it would perhaps be that when the opponents get to a slam on their own power, and you know you can beat them, don't double to increase your profit. By doubling, you tip them off, and open for them the possibility of findina an avenue of escape.

Contract Awarded

SEATTLE (AP) — Rollway Grandstand Corp. of Los Angeles has been awarded a $1.7 million contract to provide a seating system for the King County domed stadium. Project manager Gerald Schlatter says plans call for a seating capacity of 50,000 persons in aluminum bench-type seats and another 15,000 in plastic chair-type seats.

Another Black Winter for U.K.?

LONDON (CP) — Britain may be plunged into another chilling round of electrical blackouts within a few weeks unless a contract agreement is reached between the government and 105,000 angry power workers.

The electricity unions now have broken off negotiations indefinitely and are preparing industrial action to obtain what they call "a realistic settlement."

From today, there is a threat of work slowdowns at major power stations. After Oct. 27, the unions have indicated, massive blackouts may be started.

Workers are demanding a flat pay increase of about $13.25 a week for everyone, roughly a 37-per-cent jump from their current income levels.

If blackouts are instituted, it will mean the third successive winter when Britons have had to resort to candlelight and gas heaters to cope with power cuts.

Last February, blackouts were introduced during a coal miners' strike to conserve scarce fuel. In December, 1970, electricity cuts also were used during a strike by the power workers.

SEEN AS SETBACK

The unions' current 37-per-cent wage claim is a major setback for Prime Minister Edward Heath's efforts to promote voluntary restraints on prices and incomes.

Heath, in discussions with national industrial and union leaders, is trying to get agreement to keep wage increases down to a maximum of about $5.50 weekly and price increases to less than five per cent for a year.

Wednesday, the government announced that the official index of weekly basic wage rates for manual workers stood 16.7 per cent above the level of a year ago.

Price increases, in most cases somewhat above the escalation in wages, also have picked up added momentum in recent weeks.

Meanwhile, Vic Feather, head of the 10-million strong Trades Union Congress, said Wednesday that unless his organization shows some indication of co-operating with Heath, the prime minister may call a snap election and introduce compulsory restraints.

Washing Mouth Out Is a Bad Word

TORONTO (CP) — People don't mind being told they have a disease but don't want to be told they are dirty, a Cleveland dentist told the Ontario Public Health Association Wednesday.

Dr. Donald Clark, dental planner for the Cleveland health department, said a community health centre dentist dismissed a boy from his clinic and told him not to come back until he cleaned his mouth.

Dr. Clark said the boy returned, not with a clean mouth but with his irate father who picked up the dentist and threw him out of the clinic.

9 IN MEMORIAM

COOKE — William McGregor (Mac).
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love remembrance outlasts all
Loves remembrance outlasts all
And though the years by many or few
They are filled with remembrance, dear, of you.
—loving wife Nellie, Kay and Jack.

ERDMAN — In loving memory of James Oliver Erdman, who died October 19, 1970.
He bade no one a last farewell
He said goobye to none
The Heavenly gates were opened wide
A loving voice said "Come."
—Sadly missed by Mum, Dad, brothers and sisters.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Prostate Problems Need Attention

Trouble with the prostate gland is often called prostatism, and it tends to come to many men after the age of 50. The man may notice that the stream of urine is thinner and is harder to start perhaps he feels that there; is some urine left behind — and there commonly is, which means that 10 or 15 minutes after urinating the man wants to go again. Also, the man is more likely to wake up to urinate two or three or four times at night.

If he goes to a doctor, the doctor will probably examine his prostate gland, to see if the gland is just enlarged, which is very common with older men.

Sometimes in a younger man, the doctor may feel that the gland is swollen and very tender and that it is actually inflamed, often because of gonorrhea.

Years ago, the prostatis of young men was generally due to an infection with gonorrhea.

Other elderly men will be found to have a prostate gland which is very hard, especially if this hardness extends beyond the prostate gland, this usually means a cancer of the gland. One of the commonest cancers that elderly men get is in the prostate.

Many a man can go for years with an enlarged prostate; he will have a little extra difficulty in starting urination, especially at night when he has taken a drug to overcome insomnia.

Occasionally an elderly man with a big prostate will start dribbling urine, and that may require prompt operation. Sometimes, with a chronic prostatitis, a man will feel burning on urination, and he will urinate frequently; he may have an aching in the genital area, or in his lower back, or in his legs. Many men live for years with these symptoms.

Experts say that chronic prostatitis is prevalent among men who sit all day operating vehicles for a living — men such as truck-drivers and taxi-drivers.

Especially in the old days, men with an enlarged prostate gland used to have what was called massage of the gland every week or so. Some were given hot sitz baths in which the patient sits in a bath of hot water. The experts today say that in some older men repeated massage seems to be the best treatment others are afraid of massage for fear that it will lead to infection, and actute prostatitis. Massage, if it is performed, should be gently and carried out only once a week, for perhaps six weeks.

Those operations have a considerable mortality and so I was very glad when at the Mayor Clinic practically all the operations were performed transurethrally, which means that the operation was performed through a lighted tube which was passed down the urethra, or tube through which urine leaves the body. That operation has almost no mortality, and the patient is up and around in the afternoon of the operation.

$1.8M Aid for Hospitals

VANCOUVER (CP)—Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Wednesday the B.C. government will pay $1,800,000 to B.C. hospitals to offset costs incurred through wage increases to non-medical staff.

He made the announcement at the annual conference of the B.C. Hospitals Association, referring to the last contract agreement in 1970 between the association and the Hospital Employees Union. The previous Social Credit government said it would pay only 70 per cent of the increased costs, leaving the hospitals to carry the remaining 30 per cent.

"The hospital insurance service has been authorized to increase hospital budgets for the current year to cover one-half of the 30-per-cent wage increases that will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1972, and will in total provide the hospitals with approximately $1,800,999 in addition to additional funds during our current fiscal year."

The minister said he would press for full payment of the 30-per-cent difference, although he could give no guarantees at present.

As for the future policies and other wage increases, he said, "they will receive our serious consideration within the next few months."

Bill Rolfe, a spokesman for the Hospital Employees Union, said later that Cocke's announcement "is a step in the right direction, and we respect him for attempting to rectify a mistake from a previous government."

The action will "produce some relief to the deficit financing in hospitals, but it's still only a temporary easement when one reviews the total picture. We have strong views about hospital operation and will be making a comment within a month," Rolfe said.

Cocke appealed to delegates to take a more active part in promoting health and fitness, rather than being totally concerned about sickness.

"We must of course treat those that are ill even better than we are doing now, but we mustn't leave out the other aspect. I wonder what would happen if an influential group such as yourselves gave some thought to leading the communities in a fitness campaign."

He said he was not suggesting "hospitals became gymnasiums" but thought should be given to ways in which fitness programs and preventive medicine could be used to reduce the demands on hospital treatment.

He said, too, co-operation from the health service and general public will be needed regarding the assessment of community clinics. Cocke said such clinics will be built on a trial basis but their success will be impossible to guage without full co-operation.

Underwater Cable Cut Shows Island's Power Need: Shrum

A freighter has cut an underwater cable supplying power from the mainland to Vancouver Island, B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum said in Victoria Wednesday.

He said it was a spare cable and there is no immediate danger of a power shortage.

"If a second cable had been cut, then we would have been in trouble."

Shrum said the cable was cut 1,800 feet out from Roberts Bank superport in 200 feet of water.

B.C. Hydro has not yet been able to track down the ship responsible and he wasn't sure they could bring a legal case against them for damages if they found the vessel, Shrum said.

Shrum said the incident shows the vulnerability of Vanouver Island if it relies upon power from the mainland as its main source of supply.

He was addressing a meeting sponsored by Victoria Chamber of Commerce in the Empress Hotel.

He said under normal circumstances about two-thirds of Vancouver Island's current power supply comes from the mainland.

Shrum said the cable break shows some of the hazards in such systems as the overhead power line proposed from the mainland across Bute Inlet to a point near Courtenay.

The overhead power line was recommended by Jack Sexton, a consultant for the B.C. Energy Board, as the best source of additional power for the Island. Shrum as Energy Board chairman overruled the recommendation, saying top B.C. Hydro engineers had said there was no certainty the line could be kept open during the winter.

The provincial government has said it is interested enough in Sexton's recommendations to order further studies on the feasibility of the overhead power route.

Shrum said he had no objection to the study, feeling that it could confirm his view that the route was not feasible.

He said the cable-cutting incident occurred on Sept. 24.

Shrum, as he has in the past, said that the best answer to the Island's energy needs lies in nuclear power.

CALIFORNIA STUDY

He noted that Premier Dave Barrett has said he has done some reading on the subject and Shrum recommended he read the report commissioned by the State of California entitled Public Health Risks of Nuclear Power Plants.

The report by 30 University of California scientists, carried out over 18 months and published in May of this year, said there was from 10 to 100 times less environmental damage from nuclear plants than from oil-fired thermal plants, Shrum said.

The report added that coal was out because it could not meet the pollution standards of California, Shrum said.

He said a recent United Nations study called Effects of Atomic Radiation had shown that all the nuclear plants in the world today emitted only 1-100000th of the total background radiation on earth.

Using a geiger counter, Shrum showed the radiation reading from the luminous dial of his wrist watch and said it was registering higher than the radiation reading that would be given off by the nuclear power plant in Pickering, Ontario.

He said he could take the geiger counter over to the legislature and get a reading 300 times higher than the reading from the Pickering nuclear plant. He explained the high reading would come from the granite steps and had nothing to do with the politicians.

Shrum passed out a cylinder about two feet long and one inch in diametre saying at Pickering it could produce the energy equivalent of 20 tons of coal.

SMOKE PROBLEM

Coal, besides having a smoke problem, produces a high residue of ash — from one to one-and-a-half carloads for every three carloads of coal.

Shrum noted that the provincial government wanted on-site inspection to be carried out on the feasibility of the Bute Inlet route.

The consulting engineer, Sexton, had flown over the area in a helicopter, Shrum said, and he, himself, took a plane trip along the proposed route 10 days ago.

"It looks like rugged country to me," Shrum said.

He said it was generally agreed that oil and natural gas would be ruled out as power sources for the Island due to high cost and limited supply.

That left the Island with the choices of the overhead power line, coal thermal plants or a nuclear plant.

With natural gas not being needed on the Island for a thermal plant, Shrum wondered about the feasibility of the proposed natural gas pipeline to the Island.

STUDY COSTS

In any case, he had told Premier Barrett it would cost B.C. Hydro another $300,000 just to complete feasibility studies on the proposal.

(The New Democratic Party has said that if anybody builds the pipeline it should be B.C. Hydro but Premer Barrett has refused comment on whether the whole project has been discarded.)

Shrum, noting he was to retire at year's end, said he was proud of the fact that B.C. Hydro had used open bidding and no favoritism in all contracts over the past 11 years.

As well there had been no political influence used in hiring and firing over those years, he said.

He said he couldn't take credit for all the progress made by B.C. Hydro but he took satisfaction from the busy years since he became chairman in 1961.

Columbia Deal 'Disaster'

Premier Barrett said Wednesday in the legislature if Ottawa wants to open up the Columbia River treaty he will go along with the idea.

Barrett made the statement after Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) charged that the previous government made a bad deal with the United States on payments to Canada for downstream benefits.

Barrett agreed that the Columbia deal was a "disaster" and the Bennett government "blundered" in writing its part of the deal.

But he said "the only ones who can reopen that treaty are the federal Liberal government and if they do it we will go along."

He offered to accompany McGeer to Ottawa.

McGeer had said the failure of the previous government to allow for escalating costs will mean a loss of $400 million to B.C.

Under the treaty, the U.S. agreed to make payments of $501 million by 1973 at which times construction of dams at Duncan Delta, Arrow Lakes and Mica Creek would be completed.

Family Complex Planned

A combined single family-medium density apartment project worth an estimated $1 million is proposed for party-developed land overlooking the south end of Cedar Hill golf course and a new Saanich community centre.

An application for rezoning to permit construction of the apartment building on about a half acre of the site has been made to Saanich planning department.

If the proposal is approved by council, the project is expected to proceed during 1973, said Alf Porcher, of Elga Investments Ltd.

Porcher said the plan is flexible and recognizes the prime location.

"We have a responsibility, too," he said. "We certainly don't want to diminish the assets of the community."

He described the property as being about a city block in size, or four acres, on which there are at present three single family houses. These would remain as part of the subdivision that would accommodate another 16 dwellings, Porcher said.

It is planned tentatively to build a small de luxe apartment building suitable for retired or single persons, containing no more than one bedroom each.

Porcher said the building would act as a buffer between the single family dwelling area and the adjoining Cedar Hill Community Centre now under construction at the south end of the former McRae estate purchased by Saanich.

THIEU STILL OPPOSED

SAIGON (AP) — Henry Kissinger conferred twice today with President Nguyen Van Thieu, and Thieu's information ministry said the president had once again stated his opposition to a coalition government including the Communists.

President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser and the South Vietnamese president reviewed Kissinger's secret peace negotiations in Paris for 3½ hours in the morning at a meeting attended by 13 other high level U.S. and South Vietnamese officials.

Kissinger and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker returned in the late afternoon for another session with Thieu. It lasted 90 minutes.

There was no official word or leak from the U.S. side of what was being said. But a spokesman for the South Vietnamese government, Vu Khanh, read this communique at the information ministry's daily news briefing:

"Political observers in Saigon remarked that at the arrival of the American delegation in Saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu continues to meet with representatives of the Senate and the lower house, the Supreme Court and various political parties and reasserted our firm position never to accept a tripartite proposal or any other political solution which has not been agreed upon by the people of South Vietnam through democratic means."

Chamber Honors Wallace

University of Victoria professor emeritus Dr. Robert Wallace was named man of the year Wednesday by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Active in the community as past president of the Victoria Library Board, Victoria Rotary and other organizations, Wallace has been connected with UVic and its predecessor Victoria College for 47 years.

In a short acceptance speech, he said there was no ivory tower attitude at UVic as ties between the university and community have been close.

Farmer said she had worked hard not only as president but as founder of Victorian Days and was recently relected a provincial director of the chamber.

He added that she had acted as a goodwill ambassador for Victoria at conventions in other cities. She was the first woman president in the history of Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Training Tactics Impress Ballard

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard has been so impressed with the training techniques of European hockey teams that he is encouraging minor teams, their managers and coaches to watch the Europeans practise at Maple Leaf Gardens during a planned international hockey series in Ontario later this year.

"During my recent safari to Europe I personally was able to witness the enlightened approach to conditioning," Ballard, Gardens president and managing director, said Monday.

"I think it would benefit our minor teams a great deal if they were able to get a first-hand look at the modern methods used in these practices."

Teams practising at the Gardens will be from West Germany, Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

West Germany is playing a four-game series against Ontario Hockey Association senior teams in November, the Moscow Selects will play OHA junior teams as well as Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., Thunder Bay Twins and an alistar team of junior and seniors in December. Czech, Swedish and Soviet teams will play three senior teams late in December and early January.

Kraft Fined For Ads

MONTREAL (CP) — Kraft Foods Ltd. was fined $5,000 in Court of Queen's Bench Wednesday for false advertising in its "Explore Canada '72' contest.

Mr. Justice Claude Valerand, who found the company guilty of the charge Oct. 4, gave Kraft Foods 30 days to pay the fine.

"The infraction would have been more serious if a purchase had been necessary to participate in the contest," said the judge, "but you did treat thousands of Canadians as though they were imbeciles."

The contest sponsored by the company offered participants "15 big chances to win" a plane trip to any Canadian city, free use of a vehicle, $1,000 spending money and a set of luggage.

Crown prosecutor Louis-Philippe Landry said no contestant had "15 big chances to win" and 120,900 of the 271,000 entrants had simply wasted a stamp.

Prizes and weekly drawings were conducted on a regional basis, with three prizes each going to Quebec and Ontario, two each to British Columbia and the Yukon and one each to the other provinces, the prosecutor said.

PENSION BOOST DEAL WAITING

Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said today there still is no agreement between the provincial government and Ottawa over cost-sharing of the proposed $200-a-month guaranteed income for elderly citizens in B.C.

Levi said negotiations with representatives of the federal government have been going on for the last several days and that he doesn't expect agreement to be reached "for a few more days anyway."

He said the B.C. government is waiting for a decision from legal advisors on the definition of need.

Levi said the government is still aiming for the first cheques getting out by Christmas and added that he is confident that agreement can be reached.

B.C. contends that under the terms the Canada Assistance Plan, Ottawa is obliged to contribute 50 per cent of the proposed increase in the pensions.

Premier Barrett has indicated that the province would go ahead with money of its own if the federal government does not contribute, but said he is sure Ottawa will come through before the federal election on Oct. 30.

Public Roads Backed by Region

Parks committee of the Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday that public roads should remain public.

It received a report from its open space advisory committee saying consideration should be given to closing roads leading to Glintz Lake in Metchosin and Young Lake in Sooke.

A board director said a reason given was vandalism, but that local residents were opposed to the closure.

The committee's opinion will be passed to the highways department which makes decisions on such matters.

At the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night, delegates agreed to ask Highways Minister Bob Strachan not to close the two roads.

Darrell Walker of the boilermakers union said there are lots of hiking trails in the area and said the YMCA and Boy Scouts which have camps there wanted the roads closed and "this is not right."

The issue surfaced two weeks ago when the Boy Scouts of Canada and the YM-YWCA Camp Thunderbird Society asked the highways department to close the roads because of vandalism at their camps.

But sports fishermen, hikers and area residents protested, saying the two groups wanted to freeze out the public and use the lakes privately.

Strachan has received a report on protests from area residents.

District engineer E. A. Lund of the highways department said 40 submissions have been sent in asking that the roads not be closed.

Lund said he is preparing a report which "will be presented to the minister in due course."

U.S. Ambassador Here on Friday

United States Ambassador John Patrick Walsh will speak on The Search For Peace In The Middle East at the University of Victoria on Friday.

Ambassador Walsh will address a public meeting in Room 163 of the Cornett Building at 12:30 p.m.

Walsh has seen service in American embassies in Ottawa, Oslo, Dublin and Tehran. He is now diplomat in residence at Washington State University.

BLOOD CLINIC FALLS BEHIND

Donors numbered 170, 80 short of the objective for the day. Clinics at the Student Union Building continue today and Friday, from 9:30 a.m. 4:30 p.m.

Tavern Arrests Anger Calgary Police Chief

CALGARY (CP) — City police chief George Kemp said Wednesday he has written the Alberta Liquor Control Board about the abuse members of the force endure when answering calls to city taverns.

Two detectives were injured by thrown bottles and glasses Tuesday when they were putting into a squad car a man arrested in a hotel beverage room. He was later charged with a drug offence.

That was only one incident of the abuse which has reached a dangerous level, the chief said.

"Every time we have to make a lawful arrest, we have to have a back-up squad. It's dangerous for the policemen to make these kinds of arrests.

"It is beyond the bounds of human dignity to have to patrol through the taverns and this is not going to be tolerated."

Chief Kemp would not say what action he asked the control board to take, but the board has the power to revoke or suspend liquor licences.

Highrise Rapist

CALGARY (CP) — Police have warned apartment residents to keep their balcony doors locked as a search continues for the person who attacked a woman earlier this week.

Police believe the same person is responsible for six rapes committed since last November. He uses the "cat-burglar" technique to gain entry to apartment suites in early morning, usually between 2 and 5 a.m.

Addiction High

CALGARY (CP) — There could be as many as 5,000 heroin addicts in Calgary if the count included everyone who has ever used the drug, according to police chief George Kemp.

Chief Kemp stressed that he was counting every user of the drug as an addict, including what he termed "weekend users," adding 1,600 of these could be high school students.

Fall Kills Man

CALGARY (CP) — William Ralph Thompson, 56, a Calgary glass installer, was killed when he fell eight storeys at a building site in the downtown area.

Police said he apparently lost his balance as he uncovered a hole in an uncompleted floor, falling 89 feet from the 23rd to the 15th floor.

Abortions Denied

SASKATOON (CP) — Roman Catholic hospitals in Saskatchewan will neither accept therapeutic abortion committees nor allow their facilities to be used for abortions, delegates to the province's Catholic hospital conference said in a resolution.

"The current trend to rationalization with regard to reasons for inducing abortions reflects a decline in moral values which is detrimental to a right social structure," delegates agreed.

Games Project

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Medicine Hat's bid for the 1975 Canada winter games may include plans to improve the cypress ski run and build a speed-skating oval, an arena in Redcliff and another at the stampede grounds, games committee chairman Ian MacDonald stated.

Capital costs for the games would be spilt three ways between the provincial, federal and municipal governments. Medicine Hat and Redcliff are being asked to make additional expenditures to lower the total outlay. The estimated cost to Medicine Hat is $285,000.

Farmer Aid Urged

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) — Immediate aid is required for farmers in the Peace River area if they are to stay off welfare, a cabinet group was told.

"The area is weeping," said Fred Herzog, spokesman for farmers in the Gordondale-Baytree region. In some portions of the region, weather has prevented up to 80 per cent of the cereal and rapeseed crop from being harvested.

'No More Midnight Legislation'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE and BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Premier Barrett passionately defended Wednesday his public statements about eventual government takeover of B.C. Tel, saying he will never spring the move on the company without warning.

The NDP government will never use the "midnight legislation" technique of the former Social Credit government when it bought B.C. Electric in 1960, Barrett said.

His comments came during the throne speech debate after the Socred opposition moved non-confidence with an amendment to adopt part of former premier Bennett's so-called Kelowna Charter.

The house adjourned at 6 p.m. and debate on the amendment continues today.

The premier said the economy of British Columbia "has never been stronger" than it is today and said his announced policies of increasing the old age pension will help create more jobs through increased spending power by pensioners.

Barrett's statement came after mounting attacks from opposition parties over his public statements on ecopomic matters, particularly on the takeover of industries.

He was accused of doing nothing to create jobs, and of contributing to unemployment by frightening investors and causing a drop in confidence in the provincial enconomy, and depressing the stock market.

Former labor minister James Chabot focused the attack when he moved an amendment to the throne speech and said the issues of inflation and unemployment were ignored.

An apparent attempt earlier by the NDP to dispose quickly of the throne speech debate failed after whips from the Liberals and Socreds did not show up for a planned meeting at 9 a.m.

After the speech was moved and seconded by NDP MLAs after the house sat at 2 p.m., Socred house leader Frank Richter suggested the speech be adopted forthwith, but he did not request a definite motion to that effect, and merely took his seat.

It appeared the debate might end after short speeches from each party, but Pat McGeer (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) spoke at length and Chabot followed.

Barrett said he found it confusing that the opposition at first suggested a speedy end to the debate and then moved its amendment.

Barrett said the "atmosphere" of the B.C. economy is good and said "there is no depression, as suggested by some opposition members.

"Our economy has never been stronger," he said.

The premier said that what he expects from industry is no more than what the Social

3,000-YEAR PRISON TERM

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Terry Eugene Culley, 21, has been sentenced to 3,000 years in prison, the longest term ever assessed by a Dallas jury, for the murder of insurance broker Jean Geron.

The jury of nine men and three women in Judge James Zimmermann's criminal district court fixed the penalty Wednesday for Culley. Culley pleaded guilty in the case but chose to have a jury set punishment.

Federal Bilingualism Costly Flop—Report

By CLAUDE LEMELIN
Special to The Times — Copyright Le Devoir

MONTREAL — Costly efforts to foster bilingualism in the federal public service have bogged down dismally, according to confidential reports by treasury board officials.

After making a $250,000 study of the bilingual programs, the officials have recommended sweeping changes to give French-speaking public servants more influence at the top levels and more latitude to use French as their working language.

The treasury board handles all staff-relations questions for the federal government. Its personnel-branch reports are always kept confidential. The department has no jurisdiction over crown corporations, such as Air Canada, Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

In more than a dozen volumes drafted over the past six months, the authors reached the following conclusions:

—The Official Languages Act, passed by parliament in December, and companion regulations approved since then by the cabinet of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, are being "persistently and systematically violated" by departments and agencies.

—The translation bureau has quadrupled its budget since 1966, but still cannot cope with the avalanche of paper from bureaucrats who make "gross, deliberate abuse" of translators' services. The backlog exceeds 9 million words.

—In several branches of government, the bilingual drive has petered out because some key, English-speaking officials show a serious lack of co-operation' or a tendency to undermine official objectives. The task force itself nearly was disbanded because of "high-level pressure" on the cabinet.

—Despite all the talk about "French power in Ottawa," French Canadians held only 88 of the top 610 positions in the public service last year, or 14.4 per cent of these jobs. About 27 per cent of all Canadians give their mother tongue as French.

—The public service commission continues to hire an unduly large proportion of persons who speak only English, meaning that Francophone representation will drop rather than increase in the executive and technical classifications.

It costs the taxpayers $29,000 to teach the second of ficial language to one civil servant, and the failure rate still is 92 per cent.

The task force found that in a four-year period ending in the spring of 1970, a total of 6,463 public servants dropped out of the language courses without qualifying for any credits.

This represented a 'lost investment' of $17-million con-

RYAN DEMANDS INVESTIGATION

Times News Services

Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, is asking language commissioner Keith Spicer to investigate reports that federal agencies and departments regularly violate the Official Languages Act.

In a registered letter mailed Wednesday night, Ryan cited confidential government reports obtained and used by his Montreal daily, charging that bilingualism policies are threatened with "total failure."

He enclosed the documents with his letter and reminded Spicer that any Canadian citizen can request an investigation into alleged language inequities under Section 26 of the act.

Ryan's letter to Spicer, which appears on Le Devoir's editorial page, says French-speaking public servants have lost ground under the Liberal government, despite "astronomical" expenditures on language programs.

Meanwhile, treasury Board President C. M. Drury said today statistics contained in the report are outdated. The 1975 target date for a functionally filingual public service "still appears to be realistic."

He said the studies published by the newspaper were for the purpose of gathering information as the basis for the report, and were never in tended for publication.

Drury said it is "embarrassing" when papers not designed for public consumption are published in newspapers, and his department is trying to discover how the leak occurred.

Tories Unveil Tax Plan

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

TORONTO — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield today unveiled a far-reaching plan that would allow individual Canadians to defer income tax payments to the federal government and invest it in small Canadian-owned businesses.

Stanfield, speaking to the influential Empire Club meeting at the Royal York Hotel here, said his party's Canadian investment credit incentive plan would do more in a single year to stimulate the economy and create new jobs than any combination of government handouts and incentives now available.

The Conservative leader, in his major economic speech of the election campaign to date, told his 1,400-strong audience of businessmen the plan will allow the individual Canadian the same tax deferment opportunities now available to large corporations.

Stanfield said that as well as giving opportunities for investment to the average Canadian it would also provide much-needed pools of capital to small Canadian businesses wanting to expand.

Under the plan, the taxpayer would have the option of paying his total income tax bill to the revenue department or withholding some of it for approved investment in small business enterprises.

When the investor decided to pull his stakes out of the company he would then return his deferred tax money to the federal government and pay capital gains tax on his profits.

In simple terms, the plan enables the taxpayer to make profits on money he would normally give to Ottawa.

"This investment credit will be available to any Canadian citizen who makes a direct investment in the equity of a Canadian-owned business.

"The credit, which will be 50 per cent of qualified investment to a maximum $5,000 each year, will be either offset against the individual's income tax for the year or rebated direct to him.

Star Cuts Liberals

Times News Services

TORONTO — Toronto Star said today in an editorial that on the basis of the issues of unemployment and Canadian independence it has withdrawn its support from the Liberals for the first time in 50 years.

"Of the alternatives, both of which are unattractive, we prefer the Conservatives," the editorial said.

The editorial, over the initials of president and publisher Beland Honderich, said The Star has consistently supported the Liberals since the early 1920s "in the belief that the things this paper has stood for — unemployment insurance, health insurance, Canadian independence and the like — would most likely be achieved through a Liberal government."

"The preformance of the Trudeau government over the past four years, particularly in the broad economic area, has forced us to re-examine this traditional performance. We have now concluded, reluctantly, that we must register a strong protest against the government's stand on economic policy and Canadian independence."

Your Federal Candidates

Starting today and running through next Tuesday, the Times in this space will present in-depth interviews by staff reporters with the 10 candidates for election in the Oct. 30 federal election for the two seats in the Greater Victoria area.

In these interviews the candidates express their views and are questioned on the issues. Two interviews will be presented each day and the order of appearance was decided by a random draw.

TISDALLE
Esquimalt-Saanich

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Never have so few people owned so much and done so little with it.

The paraphrase of Winston Churchill's famous words was coined by Esquimalt-Saanich candidate John Tisdalle, and his belief in that statement is equalled only by the conviction that Social Credit's fiscal policies are the sole hope of rephrasing it.

"That's what inspires me and drives me on to the federal field, where the machinery exists to make changes," he says.

"My greatest concern all my life has been the paradox that a country — populated originally, when I could first figure out figures, by 10 million people and now by 20 million living in half a continent — faces misery, starvation and want and yet has the greatest wealth in the world."

Tisdalle, 55, is something unique — a longtime Socred ex-member of the provincial legislature who did not receive the kiss of death from the oh-so-unpredictable voters in last August's provincial election.

His downfall came earlier in a less spectacular but perhaps more pointed way, when, after representing Saanich and The Islands for 19 years, he failed to get the nomination from disenchanged constituency Socreds.

But now, re-appearing phoenix-like after getting the nod for the federal contest in preference to vanquished MLA Herb Bruch, Tisdalle says he didn't regard that earlier turn-down as a rude rebuff, just "pure and simple politics."

Pressed for an explanation, he speculates the voting was

GROOS
Victoria

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Incumbent Liberal MP for Victoria, David Groos, sees himself as the guardian of ecology on this coast in spite of the fact that he spends most of the time away from it in Ottawa and abroad as a Canadian government representative.

He says that the threatened oil tanker route and danger of pollution is viewed as a "purely western" problem in Ottawa.

He gives his main reason for running again to straighten out the complete problem of control of traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

"There are certain things that will not be done," he says, "unless I'm there sitting on top of it."

He lists some of them — harbors of refuge, switching of responsibility for pollution clean-up and marine rescue to the Canadian Armed Forces, instead of the Ministry of Transport.

The 54-year-old ex-navy captain wears his clothes casually, and flashes an affable smile. The combination gives the impression of a man easy to approach.

But some complain he's a hard man to reach. An unlisted home phone number (Groos retains an answering service) means only intimates can contact him directly.

Groos answers these criticisms.

"I have a wife and four kids. My number was listed for the first three years. I couldn't expect them to take all the calls."

He says it's not the number of calls that bothered him. It

Inflation, Strike Cut Pound

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to its lowest level in 22 months today under a wave of selling orders from continental centres. In two hours of hectic trading it dropped 1.5 cents.

Dealers said the pound apparently came under attack as a result of inflation and the threat of a national power strike. (See Page 33).

This was its lowest level since December, 1970. Sterling had lost more than 15 cents since June 22, when the British government freed the pound to float to halt a run on the pound.

Meanwhile in Paris, the nine nations of the European Common Market met at the summit today to celebrate their growth and plan their future but immediately split over the issue of unity.

After smiles and waves to spectators leaders of the 250-million-person community marched indoors and issued statements lauding their growing wealth and vowing to avoid battling other trade bloc powers, principally the United States.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

Flax prices, up as much as three cents in the nearby futures, were firm in the deferred months on limited short-coverings.

Oats and barley were steady at previous close levels in a domestic shipper business while rye moved one cent higher in a lights commission house trade.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 1,651,000 bushels of flax, 1,995,000 of rapeseed and 768,000 of rye.

Export loadings of Canadian wheat Wednesday included 958,000 bushels to China, 5,000 to Japan, 638,000 to the Philippines and 450,000 to the USSR.

Lakehead export wheat prices all were unchanged.

And for the Cadets, Quick March Down Road

If most local politicians had their way cadets at Royal Roads Military College would be marching down the road to another school site, leaving the academy's magnificent parkland by the sea open to the public.

One federal candidate called the idea a "Liberal plot" of the press but the majority said they favored the suggestion by Times' columnist Jack Scott that a public park be established on the 650-acre college site.

★

"It's a wonderful idea," Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst said, "we want to get public control of the waterfront hopefully all the way around to William Head."

Capital Regional Board chairman Hugh Curtis agreed that the idea was a gool one, but, like most of those questioned, said he wouldn't want to see the college closed.

"It gets my approval," he said, "on the condition that the military finds another location for the school.

"The college fits in with Victoria's general image," Curtis added, "of being a centre of government, armed forces and educational institutes."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen voiced even stronger disapproval over the aspect of closing the school:

"It may seem pretty expensive to have 250 cadets there," he said, "but it's cheap in the event of war.

"If Mr. Scott can assure me there'll be no war, then I'll agree."

Pollen agreed it was a fast-growing residential area and Royal Roads might serve as a good recreational centre but said there were more important priorities to face such as the need for industrial sites.

★

"We could use our money better elsewhere," he said, "but if the federal government wants to make it a park that would be great."

"It's a motherhood issue," Pollen added.

Federal candidates in Victoria Allan McKinnon and Dan Heffernan both said the park idea is excellent, provided a suitable new location was found for the training school.

"I agree there's a lot of parkland there not needed for Royal Roads," McKinnon said, "and they could probably train elsewhere in Esquimalt."

"There's lots of room to incorporate it with the CFB base," Heffernan said.

"It's a heck of a good idea," Victoria Independent candidate Michael Hallpatch commented, "maybe the college could be moved to combine with the new world college to be established at Pedder Bay."

Not all the candidates agreed.

Liberal candidate David Groos, a former navy captain, said a great deal of the acreage is being used by the military establishment and the sort of land needed for a park could be found elsewhere.

"Until the armed forces decide Royal Roads is not required," Groos added, "there's no better way for the land to be preserved."

Groos agreed it would be sensible to make the land a park if Royal Roads is ever phased out.

"I certainly don't advocate closure of the school," Conservative Donald Munro said.

"It's serving a very useful purpose now," he said, "and it's open to the public for visits anyway."

Victoria Socred candidate Clifford Stretch also opposed the idea, saying the area should be kept as a training centre for civilians as well as the military.

"Maybe a portion could be used for recreation purposes but it should be basically a training and mental health centre to restore the strength and mentality of our youth."

Both NDP candidates supported Scott's suggestion.

"There's no reason why any training school should be on parkland like that," Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Roger Smith said, "the public should have access to it."

"It's an ideal site for training fishermen and coast guard, etc.," he explained.

Flemming Hansen, NDP candidate for Victoria, said the idea sounded good but would require "an entirely new military policy on the part of the federal government."

Only one candidate refused to comment on the issue. John Tisdalle, Socred aspirant in Esquimalt-Saanich, said, "I don't see what this has to do with the election.

"Sitting in the pressroom he (Scott) can recommend any kind of Liberal machine politics he wants," Tisdalle said, "I don't see that I should comment on it."

'Can Scott Assure Me There'll Be No War?'— Mayor Pollen

Greenpeace Veteran Carries On

It turned out to be a one-man crusade by Dave Birmingham of Nanoose Day — veteran of the Greenpeace missions to Amchitka — to make Canadians aware of the horrors of the Vietnam war.

Rental Bureau Wins Backing of Aldermen

Victoria city council will be asked to establish a Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau and to finance its first year of operation under the Community Council of Greater Victoria, at a cost of $11,590.

But Ald. Alf Hood, the leading proponent of the scheme, told council's finance and legislative committee today that although Victoria is the sole backer the service cannot be confined to city limits.

As the Community Council, which will run the bureau, serves and is supported by the Greater Victoria area, "it would not be acceptable to restrict their activities in this new function," Hood stated in a report.

However, he assured aldermen detailed records will be kept during 1973 and, depending on the degree of use made of the bureau by the various parts of Greater Victoria, a further approach can be made to the Intermunicipal Committee for help in financing the operation.

Strongly urging establishment of the advisory bureau by bylaw, and approval of 1973 financing, Hood pointed out that the idea had been tossed around for almost a year.

Municipalities other than Victoria had shown a general reluctance to give their support, the proposal had gone back and forth to the Intermunicipal Committee and "we have gone around in a complete circle twice," he said.

"I don't think this can be deferred any longer."

Hood speculated that renters now account for something like 57 per cent of Victoria's population, and said a body to advise on all landlord-tenant matters and mediate in disputes was an urgent need.

Four organizations are now functioning in this field, the Greater Victoria Apartment Owners Association, the Rental Accommodation Advisory Bureau (carried over on a one-man voluntary basis from the original board set up by council), the Victoria Rental Aid Service and the Capital Region Tenants Association.

But Hood said none of these fulfil the functions of a properly-constituted advisory bureau.

Mayor Peter Pollen voiced strong support for the proposed bureau, saying it would in no way be an effort to "legislate rents" yet it would provide protection for such persons as tenants in apartments that came in for "wholesale purchase" who would be faced with massive rent increases.

As the provincial government had failed to take on the responsibility the city should not shirk it, he added.

Ald. Harold Olafson, the committee member to vote against the recommendation, said the functions of the bureau were definitely not the responsibility of a municipality.

The proposal to go before council sets out all the suggested aims and functions of the three-man bureau, consisting of one representative each of the landlords and tenants, and a chairman nominated by the Community Council.

The bylaw establishing the body, the recommendation says, should allow landlords to levy a security deposit of not more than half a month's rent.

Appeal Set For Young

A public hearing has been set for Nov. 28 in Campbell River for submissions in the appeal of radical school principal John Young against his dismissal by the Campbell River school board.

Victoria lawyer B. J. B. Morahan, 67, will chair the board of reference set up by the provincial government under legislation passed earlier this year for consideration of dismissal appeals by tenured teachers.

The hearing will be open to press and public in the manner of an appeal court, Morahan said today.

Submissions by counsel for Young and the school board will be heard at the Discovery Inn starting "between 9 and 10 a.m." Morahan said.

Prime Minister to Get 'The Tour'

The lack of easy access to Patricia Bay airport will be impressed upon the prime minister when he arrives next Tuesday for a major speech in the Royal Theatre.

Trudeau is expected to land in his special DC-9 jet with about 30 reporters and members of his staff at 3 p.m. after a flight from Saskatoon.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which has campaigned unsuccessfully at federal and provincial government levels for better road access to the airport, will make sure the prime minister is aware of the problem.

Chamber transportation committee director Jack McKernan said consideration is being given to some kind of visual display, but in any case Liberal candidates for the area who will be riding with Trudeau have assured McKernan they will draw attention to "that little country road" connecting the airport with the highway.

A motor cavalcade will carry the Trudeau party directly from the airport along Patricia Bay Highway to the theatre, where he is expected at 4:15. Mel Couvelier, who is handling the arrangements, said Trudeau's address is likely to be about 30 minutes long, enabling him to depart for Vancouver immediately.

Exact timing will depend upon travel arrangements in getting the prime minister here, the weather and other flying conditions, it was indicated.

When Trudeau came to Victoria to address a rally in Beacon Hill Park for the 1968 election he flew directly from Vancouver to the park by helicopter. Other trips are believed to have been by float plane, avoiding the airport.

Truck Leaves Road, Flips in Fog

A tractor trailer driven by Patrick Thompson, 26, of 4144 Wilkinson, jacknifed on the Pat Bay Highway early this morning in thick fog that has blanketed Southern Vancouver Island for two days.

No one was hurt when the large truck ran off the road but it was five hours before a crew using a crane towed the wrecked trailer away. The accident happened near Haliburton Road at 2:20 a.m.

Another accident in dense fog sent a man to Victoria General Hospital with minor injuries when two cars collided at 7:09 a.m. at the corner of Union and Quadra.

Fritz Benischek, 47, of 1219 Goldstream was admitted to hospital after his car collided with that of Edgar Vonkaldenberg, 62, of 10375 Wilson. Damages to Benischek's car were estimated by Saanich police at $1,000.

★ ★ ★

Both Saanich police and Colwood RCMP warned motorists that headlights are mandatory under the foggy driving conditions.

Colwood RCMP said the Malahat was "socked right in last night and is still socked in" this morning, with visibility reduced to 300 to 400 feet at times.

Air Canada's out - going morning flights were cancelled, and officials said the outlook was poor for afternoon flights.

Victoria Flying Service Ltd. cancelled its 8 a.m. flight out of the Inner Harbor, and its 1:30 p.m. flight was doubtful.

Several areas of Victoria and Saanich had a power blackout for 14 minutes this morning, from 4:50 to 5:04 a.m. A B.C. Hydro spokesman said weather conditions may have caused the fault in the power line between Esquimalt substation and Horsey substation.

B.C. Ferries boats and buses both reported they were running on schedule.

★ ★ ★

The fog should begin breaking up Friday, allowing a few sunny periods in the afternoon, the Victoria weather office predicts.

A new weather system moving down the coast will reach the city tonight, bringing with it clouds which will push the fog south, said weatherman Allan McQuarrie.

Davis Must Sign Disputed Bylaw

A B.C. Supreme Court judge has ruled North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis must sign a controversial bylaw paving the way for the Kingswood development.

Davis, who is out of town and could not be reached for comment, has refused to sign the bylaw since it was passed by a 5-2 vote of council last June.

He has repeatedly argued that council has not given sufficient consideration to the project, a view that the aldermen supporting the bylaw have consistently denied.

The bylaw will allow a land use contract to be negotiated for development of about 350 acres in North Saanich bounded by West Saanich annd Wain Roads.

Property owner Geoffrey Ellis, who plans a development involving more than 300 homes and an 18-hole golf course, sought a writ of mandamus against Davis when the mayor continued in his refusal to sign the bylaw.

The ruling in favor of Ellis was handed down by Mr. Justice R. A. Wooten Wednesday. It followed a hearing held Sept. 19.

The Capital Regional District will be asked at its next meeting to approve a $3,000 study of drainage problems in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

In a recommendation, public works committee said it wanted to find a means of combatting problems in poor drainage areas.

But Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said it is time the area "incorporated and stopped hanging around the neck of the regional board."

Langford director Earl Pallister said a horse could be led to a trough, but its head couldn't be stuck into it.

"Eventually we are going to be a municipality but the area won't be pushed," he said.

GALLUP POLL

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

However they vote on election day, about a third of the Canadian voters hold that the Liberal Party has the best leaders. Conservatives obtain less than half this rating — 14%, while almost as many,(11%) think that the NDP leaders are tops. For one in 10 voters ,there is no difference between the parties in their quality of leadership, while almost three in 10 (28%) are unable to make a choice.

In the nation's largest cities, Liberals hold a more than three to one lead over the Conservatives on this question, reaching a 38% ratio, compared to the PC's 11% selection. Liberals maintain a wide lead in all population segments, but it narrows through the smaller centres. In medium-size cities (from 10 to 100 thousand population) it is twice that of the PCs. In villages and towns, and in the rural areas it is a less than two to one lead.

These facts were revealed in a study taken a month ago, on September 16, 18 and 19, with a random sample of 741 adults, during interviews in households carefully selected to represent the nation as a whole. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a 4% margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

The question:

"Which federal party do you yourself think has the best leaders?"

The tables below shows the national viewpoint, as compared to those in big and medium-size cities, towns and villages, and rural areas.

NATIONAL	35%	14%	11%	2%	10%	28%

Slide at End —Money Men

Victoria investment managers are generally confident the sharp slide in B.C. stock prices is nearing an end.

Election of the NDP and takeover statements by Premier Barrett have contributed to a loss of some 12 per cent in total value of the shares of the major British Columbia firms listed on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Total paper loss since the Aug. 30 election is more than $450 million, with $30 million erased from B.C. Tel shares alone.

Premier Barrett has said he definitely will take over the company.

On election day B.C. Tel shares were selling for $64.50 and by mid-morning today the price was $55, a total decline of $9.50 per share or $30,747,937.50.

The word on B.C. Tel shares in Victoria investment houses was "hold!"

Going by the experience of the provincial government takeover of the B.C. Electric, the shareholders who held on the longest gained the most. Investors who sold on takeover rumors got about $36 per share while those who held on were awarded $41.88 per share by the courts.

Most of the selling pressure is reported in Toronto and New York, although some of those selling on the Toronto Stock Exchange live in B.C.

W. J. Cathro, assistant manager of Richardson Securities Ltd., said his firm is urging clients to hold on to B.C. tel shares because most dealers believe the courts will value the share above the current selling price of $55.

L. B. Williams, manager of Pitfield Mackay Ross Ltd., called $55 a "give - away price."

"B.C. Tel is a good company. The takeover bid would have to go to the courts. Besides, the takeover is years away," Williams said.

He said the price may still go lower and, if it did, it would become a very attractive bargain.

James Bassett, manager of Midland Osler Securities Ltd., said strong emotions had briefly taken hold of the market and it might take some time for confidence to return.

"The past month has been a difficult time for investors and anyone else connected with the market," he said.

However confidence could be restored to the market once investors begin buying up B.C. stocks at what may be bargain prices.

On the political front, Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative candidate Don Munro said NDP policies were injuring Canadian investors.

He said the federal NDP attacks foreign investment while in B.C. the policies of the provincial NDP government reduce the savings of Canadian investors.

Slash Burners Face Suits

Legal action against logging companies who contravened slash-burning regulations on Vancouver Island is being considered by the B.C. Forest Service, a spokesman said today.

At least two forest fires were caused by slash-burning on south Vancouver Island last weekend, he said. One occurred in the Sooke area and the other in the Lake Cowichan district.

Water bombers were used to extinguish one fire, he said.

"I don't know the extent of the damage yet," he said. "But the fires did cause concern to the forest district and it is now considering legal action against the companies."

$1.8M Aid for Hospitals

VANCOUVER (CP)—Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Wednesday the B.C. government will pay $1,800,000 to B.C. hospitals to offset costs incurred through wage increases to non-medical staff.

He made the announcement at the annual conference of the B.C. Hospitals Association, referring to the last contract agreement in 1970 between the association and the Hospital Employees Union. The previous Social Credit government said it would pay only 70 per cent of the increased costs, leaving the hospitals to carry the remaining 30 per cent.

"The hospital insurance service has been authorized to increase hospital budgets for the current year to cover one-half of the 30-per-cent wage increases that will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1972, and will in total provide the hospitals with approximately $1,800,999 in addition to additional funds during our current fiscal year."

The minister said he would press for full payment of the 30-per-cent difference, although he could give no guarantees at present.

As for the future policies and other wage increases, he said, "they will receive our serious consideration within the next few months."

Bill Rolfe, a spokesman for the Hospital Employees Union, said later that Cocke's announcement "is a step in the right direction, and we respect him for attempting to rectify a mistake from a previous government."

The action will "produce some relief to the deficit financing in hospitals, but it's still only a temporary easement when one reviews the total picture. We have strong views about hospital operation and will be making a comment within a month," Rolfe said.

Cocke appealed to delegates to take a more active part in promoting health and fitness, rather than being totally concerned about sickness.

"We must of course treat those that are ill even better than we are doing now, but we mustn't leave out the other aspect. I wonder what would happen if an influential group such as yourselves gave some thought to leading the communities in a fitness campaign."

He said he was not suggesting "hospitals became gymnasiums" but thought should be given to ways in which fitness programs and preventive medicine could be used to reduce the demands on hospital treatment.

He said, too, co-operation from the health service and general public will be needed regarding the assessment of community clinics. Cocke said such clinics will be built on a trial basis but their success will be impossible to guage without full co-operation.

Underwater Cable Cut Shows Island's Power Need: Shrum

A freighter has cut an underwater cable supplying power from the mainland to Vancouver Island, B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum said in Victoria Wednesday.

He said it was a spare cable and there is no immediate danger of a power shortage.

"If a second cable had been cut, then we would have been in trouble."

Shrum said the cable was cut 1,800 feet out from Roberts Bank superport in 200 feet of water.

B.C. Hydro has not yet been able to track down the ship responsible and he wasn't sure they could bring a legal case against them for damages if they found the vessel, Shrum said.

Shrum said the incident shows the vulnerability of Vanouver Island if it relies upon power from the mainland as its main source of supply.

He was addressing a meeting sponsored by Victoria Chamber of Commerce in the Empress Hotel.

He said under normal circumstances about two-thirds of Vancouver Island's current power supply comes from the mainland.

Shrum said the cable break shows some of the hazards in such systems as the overhead power line proposed from the mainland across Bute Inlet to a point near Courtenay.

The overhead power line was recommended by Jack Sexton, a consultant for the B.C. Energy Board, as the best source of additional power for the Island. Shrum as Energy Board chairman overruled the recommendation, saying top B.C. Hydro engineers had said there was no certainty the line could be kept open during the winter.

The provincial government has said it is interested enough in Sexton's recommendations to order further studies on the feasibility of the overhead power route.

Shrum said he had no objection to the study, feeling that it could confirm his view that the route was not feasible.

He said the cable-cutting incident occurred on Sept. 24.

Shrum, as he has in the past, said that the best answer to the Island's energy needs lies in nuclear power.

CALIFORNIA STUDY

He noted that Premier Dave Barrett has said he has done some reading on the subject and Shrum recommended he read the report commissioned by the State of California entitled Public Health Risks of Nuclear Power Plants.

The report by 30 University of California scientists, carried out over 18 months and published in May of this year, said there was from 10 to 100 times less environmental damage from nuclear plants than from oil-fired thermal plants, Shrum said.

The report added that coal was out because it could not meet the pollution standards of California, Shrum said.

He said a recent United Nations study called Effects of Atomic Radiation had shown that all the nuclear plants in the world today emitted only 1-100000th of the total background radiation on earth.

Using a geiger counter, Shrum showed the radiation reading from the luminous dial of his wrist watch and said it was registering higher than the radiation reading that would be given off by the nuclear power plant in Pickering, Ontario.

He said he could take the geiger counter over to the legislature and get a reading 300 times higher than the reading from the Pickering nuclear plant. He explained the high reading would come from the granite steps and had nothing to do with the politicians.

Shrum passed out a cylinder about two feet long and one inch in diametre saying at Pickering it could produce the energy equivalent of 20 tons of coal.

SMOKE PROBLEM

Coal, besides having a smoke problem, produces a high residue of ash — from one to one-and-a-half carloads for every three carloads of coal.

Shrum noted that the provincial government wanted on-site inspection to be carried out on the feasibility of the Bute Inlet route.

The consulting engineer, Sexton, had flown over the area in a helicopter, Shrum said, and he, himself, took a plane trip along the proposed route 10 days ago.

"It looks like rugged country to me," Shrum said.

He said it was generally agreed that oil and natural gas would be ruled out as power sources for the Island due to high cost and limited supply.

That left the Island with the choices of the overhead power line, coal thermal plants or a nuclear plant.

With natural gas not being needed on the Island for a thermal plant, Shrum wondered about the feasibility of the proposed natural gas pipeline to the Island.

STUDY COSTS

In any case, he had told Premier Barrett it would cost B.C. Hydro another $300,000 just to complete feasibility studies on the proposal.

(The New Democratic Party has said that if anybody builds the pipeline it should be B.C. Hydro but Premer Barrett has refused comment on whether the whole project has been discarded.)

Shrum, noting he was to retire at year's end, said he was proud of the fact that B.C. Hydro had used open bidding and no favoritism in all contracts over the past 11 years.

As well there had been no political influence used in hiring and firing over those years, he said.

He said he couldn't take credit for all the progress made by B.C. Hydro but he took satisfaction from the busy years since he became chairman in 1961.

Columbia Deal 'Disaster'

Premier Barrett said Wednesday in the legislature if Ottawa wants to open up the Columbia River treaty he will go along with the idea.

Barrett made the statement after Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver - Point Grey) charged that the previous government made a bad deal with the United States on payments to Canada for downstream benefits.

Barrett agreed that the Columbia deal was a "disaster" and the Bennett government "blundered" in writing its part of the deal.

But he said "the only ones who can reopen that treaty are the federal Liberal government and if they do it we will go along."

He offered to accompany McGeer to Ottawa.

McGeer had said the failure of the previous government to allow for escalating costs will mean a loss of $400 million to B.C.

Under the treaty, the U.S. agreed to make payments of $501 million by 1973 at which times construction of dams at Duncan Delta, Arrow Lakes and Mica Creek would be completed.

Family Complex Planned

A combined single family-medium density apartment project worth an estimated $1 million is proposed for party-developed land overlooking the south end of Cedar Hill golf course and a new Saanich community centre.

An application for rezoning to permit construction of the apartment building on about a half acre of the site has been made to Saanich planning department.

If the proposal is approved by council, the project is expected to proceed during 1973, said Alf Porcher, of Elga Investments Ltd.

Porcher said the plan is flexible and recognizes the prime location.

"We have a responsibility, too," he said. "We certainly don't want to diminish the assets of the community."

He described the property as being about a city block in size, or four acres, on which there are at present three single family houses. These would remain as part of the subdivision that would accommodate another 16 dwellings, Porcher said.

It is planned tentatively to build a small de luxe apartment building suitable for retired or single persons, containing no more than one bedroom each.

Porcher said the building would act as a buffer between the single family dwelling area and the adjoining Cedar Hill Community Centre now under construction at the south end of the former McRae estate purchased by Saanich.

Chamber Honors Wallace

Active in the community as past president of the Victoria Library Board, Victoria Rotary and other organizations, Wallace has been connected with UVic and its predecessor Victoria College for 47 years.

In a short acceptance speech, he said there was no ivory tower attitude at UVic as ties between the university and community have been close.

Farmer said she had worked hard not only as president but as founder of Victorian Days and was recently relected a provincial director of the chamber.

He added that she had acted as a goodwill ambassador for Victoria at conventions in other cities. She was the first woman president in the history of Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Training Tactics Impress Ballard

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard has been so impressed with the training techniques of European hockey teams that he is encouraging minor teams, their managers and coaches to watch the Europeans practise at Maple Leaf Gardens during a planned international hockey series in Ontario later this year.

"During my recent safari to Europe I personally was able to witness the enlightened approach to conditioning," Ballard, Gardens president and managing director, said Monday.

"I think it would benefit our minor teams a great deal if they were able to get a first-hand look at the modern methods used in these practices."

Teams practising at the Gardens will be from West Germany, Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union.

West Germany is playing a four-game series against Ontario Hockey Association senior teams in November, the Moscow Selects will play OHA junior teams as well as Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., Thunder Bay Twins and an allstar team of junior and seniors in December. Czech, Swedish and Soviet teams will play three senior teams late in December and early January.

THIEU STILL OPPOSED

SAIGON (AP) — Henry Kissinger conferred twice today with President Nguyen Van Thieu, and Thieu's information ministry said the president had once again stated his opposition to a coalition government including the Communists.

President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser and the South Vietnamese president reviewed Kissinger's secret peace negotiations in Paris for 3½ hours in the morning at a meeting attended by 13 other high level U.S. and South Vietnamese officials.

Kissinger and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker returned in the late afternoon for another session with Thieu. It lasted 90 minutes.

There was no official word or leak from the U.S. side of what was being said. But a spokesman for the South Vietnamese government, Vu Khanh, read this communique at the information ministry's daily news briefing:

"Political observers in Saigon remarked that at the arrival of the American delegation in Saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu continues to meet with representatives of the Senate and the lower house, the Supreme Court and various political parties and reasserted our firm position never to accept a tripartite proposal or any other political solution which has not been agreed upon by the people of South Vietnam through democratic means."

Kraft Fined For Ads

MONTREAL (CP) — Kraft Foods Ltd. was fined $5,000 in Court of Queen's Bench Wednesday for false advertising in its "Explore Canada 70" contest.

Mr. Justice Claude Vallerand, who found the company guilty of the charge Oct. 4, gave Kraft Foods 30 days to pay the fine.

"The infraction would have been more serious if a purchase had been necessary to participate in the contest," said the judge, "but you did treat thousands of Canadians as though they were imbeciles."

The contest sponsored by the company offered participants "15 big chances to win" a plane trip to any Canadian city, free use of a vehicle, $1,000 spending money and a set of luggage.

Crown prosecutor Louis-Philippe Landry said no contestant had "15 big chances to win" and 120,900 of the 271,000 entrants had simply wasted a stamp.

Prizes and weekly drawings were conducted on a regional basis, with three prizes each going to Quebec and Ontario, two each to British Columbia and the Yukon and one each to the other provinces, the prosecutor said.

U.S. Ambassador Here on Friday

United States Ambassador John Patrick Walsh will speak on The Search For Peace In The Middle East at the University of Victoria on Friday.

Ambassador Walsh will address a public meeting in Room 163 of the Cornett Building at 12:30 p.m.

Walsh has seen service in American embassies in Ottawa, Oslo, Dublin and Tehran. He is now diplomat in residence at Washington State University.

PENSION BOOST DEAL WAITING

Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said today there still is no agreement between the provincial government and Ottawa over cost-sharing of the proposed $200-a-month guaranteed income for elderly citizens in B.C.

Levi said negotiations with representatives of the federal government have been going on for the last several days and that he doesn't expect agreement to be reached "for a few more days anyway."

He said the B.C. government is waiting for a decision from legal advisors on the definition of need.

Levi said the government is still aiming for the first cheques getting out by Christmas and added that he is confident that agreement can be reached.

B.C. contends that under the terms the Canada Assistance Plan, Ottawa is obliged to contribute 50 per cent of the proposed increase in the pensions.

Premier Barrett has indicated that the province would go ahead with money of its own if the federal government does not contribute, but said he is sure Ottawa will come through before the federal election on Oct. 30.

Public Roads Backed by Region

Parks committee of the Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday that public roads should remain public.

It received a report from its open space advisory committee saying consideration should be given to closing roads leading to Glintz Lake in Metchosin and Young Lake in Sooke.

A board director said a reason given was vandalism, but that local residents were opposed to the closure.

The committee's opinion will be passed to the highways department which makes decisions on such matters.

At the Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night, delegates agreed to ask Highways Minister Bob Strachan not to close the two roads.

Darrell Walker of the boilermakers union said there are lots of hiking trails in the area and said the YMCA and Boy Scouts which have camps there wanted the roads closed and "this is not right."

The issue surfaced two weeks ago when the Boy Scouts of Canada and the YM-YWCA Camp Thunderbird Society asked the highways department to close the roads because of vandalism at their camps.

But sports fishermen, hikers and area residents protested, saying the two groups wanted to freeze out the public and use the lakes privately.

Strachan has received a report on protests from area residents.

District engineer E. A. Lund of the highways department said 40 submissions have been sent in asking that the roads not be closed.

Lund said he is preparing a report which "will be presented to the minister in due course."

BLOOD CLINIC FALLS BEHIND

Donors numbered 170, 80 short of the objective for the day. Clinics at the Student Union Building continue today and Friday, from 9:30 a.m. 4:30 p.m.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who purchased a stolen bicycle, painted it and changed many of the parts, was sentenced to nine months in prison by Judge F. S. Green in provincial court Wednesday.

Prosecutor John Macintyre told the court that Murray bought the bicycle from another man for $60. The retail value was $325.

Police went to Murray's home Aug. 20 after receiving information concerning the bicycle from a sporting goods shop where he had taken it for repairs.

Macintyre said Murray's previous record included six months for breaking and entering and theft in October, 1971, nine months for possession of stolen property and possession of a narcotic in September, 1969, and a $350 fine for theft under $50 in May, 1969.

"Your record certainly doesn't speak well for you, Mr. Murray," said Green, "under the circumstances I think I have no alternative but to sentence you to a term of imprisonment."

The judge said he would have imposed a sentence of more than five months for Terry A. Mullaney, 22, of 23 - 2503 Blanshard, if alcohol had not been involved in his crimes.

Mullaney was convicted of breaking and entering and theft Oct. 4 and he pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and breach of probation Wednesday.

Macintyre said the accused had been drinking at a local beer parlor and as he was leaving he stole a brief case from a car in the parking lot.

A Victoria police constable testified that Mullaney later broke into S.J. Willis School, stole several small items and put them in the brief case.

The constable said the man had been drinking, but in his opinion was not drunk.

Defence counsel Douglas Macfarlane said Mullaney had been drinking for seven hours prior to the incident.

"The accused was so drunk that he could not form the intent to commit this offence," said Macfarlane.

Green said Mullaney wasn't even drunk, in the opinion of a constable with five years experience in police work, and found the accused guilty of the breaking and entering and theft charge.

The other two charges were remanded to Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to both.

Mullaney was placed on probation May 10 for a similar charge and the breach of probation arose from the breaking and entering and theft conviction.

"I find myself here, dealing with a young man, who in May of this year, was before the courts on a similar offence," said Green, "it's obvious that alcohol has played some part in this offence."

He was sentenced to five months on the breaking and entering and theft charge, given a five-month concurrent sentence on the theft under $200 charge, and a two-month concurrent sentence on the breach of probation charge.

Ross William McTavish, 21, of 732 Meaford, was fined $350 and given a six-month probationary term for theft over $200.

Macintyre told the court McTavish purchased some stereo equipment from D. S. Young Ltd., 794 Fort, and as he was leaving the store picked up a casette tape recorder, worth $380, and put it in a suitcase.

McTavish told police he did it "to see if it could be done," said Macintyre.

Censoring Moved

CALGARY (CP) — Police will no longer interfere directly with book distribution in Calagary, the police commission said Tuesday at a meeting involving censorship.

Chairman Jack Prothroe said any suspect books now will be sent to Edmonton where the attorney-general's department will decide whether they are suitable to be sold.

Regiments Will Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department said Tuesday there are no plans to abolish traditional regimental names, badges and headgear in the Canadian Armed Forces in favor of uniform military designations and dress.

A department spokesman was responding to a letter circulated by the Governor-General's Horse Guards, an armed forces reserve regiment, charging that "military authorities in Ottawa" planned to abolish distinguishing titles and dress "in a short number of months."

Labor Raps 'Elitists' On Minimum Pay Raise

Opposition critics of the new provincial government's move to raise the minimum wage in stages to $2.50 an hour in 18 months were rapped by Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night.

Neil Hindle of the Boilermakers' Union said he is appalled to see "this elitist group in the house" say that such a move is inflationary.

He singled out Conservative house leader Dr. G. Scott Wallace and Liberal leader David Anderson, "so quick to flail at the poor people who will receive $2.50 in 18 months."

He said the government is to be commended for helping people "who have been at the short end of the stick for so long. This money will go right back into the economy. The ones at the top of society are the ones ready to cut the working poor's throat."

But Larry Tickner of the Carpenters' Union predicted the minimum wage increase will result in layoffs although he added that poor wages "encourage inefficient operations."

He criticized the New Democratic Party because it had promised $2.50 an hour immediately, which now turns out to be 1974.

"This doesn't seem very immediate and it will be worth what $1.50 is now," he said.

The council also voted to regret "scare tactics" of some politicians regarding takeover of utilities.

Hindle said reaction to the possible takeover of B.C. Telephone is "more detrimental" than a takeover, which has been indicated as a low priority of the new government.

Hospital Controls Endorsed

Victoria Labor Council voted Wednesday night to support Health Minister Dennis Cocke in having more rigid controls and more frequent inspections of private hospitals.

The action followed newspaper reports indicating this will be done by the health department.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said there had been a controversy over inspections at Sandringham Private Hospital.

While not all private hospitals and rest homes are bad, "there are some black holes of Calcutta" and the labor council had an obligation "to be vigilant."

Neil Hindle of the boilermakers' union said he hoped he wasn't going to scare the stock market, but this area of health care "should be within the community."

Another delegate, Darrell Walker, also of the boilermakers, said private hospitals "should be run by the province, not for profits," and he hoped the provincial government will take over all of them.

Royal Roads To Celebrate Anniversary

Royal Roads Military College will mark its 30th anniversary Nov. 11, with a parade of the Cadet Wing at 10 a.m. and dedication of a memorial to graduates who gave their lives on active service.

Chief Justice J. O. Wilson, administrator on behalf of the Crown, will be guest of honor at the anniversary activities and all former cadets, students and staff of the college and their families are invited to attend.

'No More Midnight Legislation'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE and BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Premier Barrett passionately defended Wednesday his public statements about eventual government takeover of B.C. Tel, saying he will never spring the move on the company without warning.

The NDP government will never use the "midnight legislation" technique of the former Social Credit government when it bought B.C. Electric in 1960, Barrett said.

His comments came during the throne speech debate after the Socred opposition moved non-confidence with an amendment to adopt part of former premier Bennett's so-called Kelowna Charter.

The house adjourned at 6 p.m. and debate on the amendment continues today.

The premier said the economy of British Columbia "has never been stronger" than it is today and said his announced policies of increasing the old age pension will help create more jobs through increased spending power by pensioners.

Barrett's statement came after mounting attacks from opposition parties over his public statements on economic matters, particularly on the takeover of industries.

He was accused of doing nothing to create jobs, and of contributing to unemployment by frightening investors and causing a drop in confidence in the provincial economy, and depressing the stock market.

Former labor minister James Chabot focused the attack when he moved an amendment to the throne speech and said the issues of inflation and unemployment were ignored.

An apparent attempt earlier by the NDP to dispose quickly of the throne speech debate failed after whips from the Liberals and Socreds did not show up for a planned meeting at 9 a.m.

After the speech was moved and seconded by NDP MLAs after the house sat at 2 p.m., Socred house leader Frank Richter suggested the speech be adopted forthwith, but he did not request a definite motion to that effect, and merely took his seat.

It appeared the debate might end after short speeches from each party, but Pat McGeer (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) spoke at length and Chabot followed.

Barrett said he found it confusing that the opposition at first suggested a speedy end to the debate and then moved its amendment.

Barrett said the "atmosphere" of the B.C. economy is good and said "there is no depression, as suggested by some opposition members.

"Our economy has never been stronger," he said.

The premier said that what he expects from industry is no more than what the Social

3,000-YEAR PRISON TERM

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Terry Eugene Culley, 21, has been sentenced to 3,000 years in prison, the longest term ever assessed by a Dallas jury, for the murder of insurance broker Jean Geron.

The jury of nine men and three women in Judge James Zimmermann's criminal district court fixed the penalty Wednesday for Culley. Culley pleaded guilty in the case but chose to have a jury set punishment.

Federal Bilingualism Costly Flop—Report

By CLAUDE LEMELIN
Special to The Times — Copyright Le Devoir

MONTREAL — Costly efforts to foster bilingualism in the federal public service have bogged down dismally, according to confidential reports by treasury board officials.

After making a $250,000 study of the bilingual programs, the officials have recommended sweeping changes to give French-speaking public servants more influence at the top levels and more latitude to use French as their working language.

The treasury board handles all staff-relations questions for the federal government. Its personnel-branch reports are always kept confidential. The department has no jurisdiction over crown corporations, such as Air Canada, Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

In more than a dozen volumes drafted over the past six months, the authors reached the following conclusions:

—The Official Languages Act, passed by parliament in December, and companion regulations approved since then by the cabinet of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, are being "persistently and systematically violated" by departments and agencies.

—The translation bureau has quadrupled its budget since 1966, but still cannot cope with the avalanche of paper from bureaucrats who make "gross, deliberate abuse" of translators' services. The backlog exceeds 9 million words.

—In several branches of government, the bilingual drive has petered out because some key, English-speaking officials show a serious lack of co-operation or a tendency to undermine official objectives. The task force itself nearly was disbanded because of "high-level pressure" on the cabinet.

—Despite all the talk about "French power in Ottawa," French Canadians held only 88 of the top 610 positions in the public service last year, or 14.4 per cent of these jobs. About 27 per cent of all Canadians give their mother tongue as French.

—The public service commission continues to hire an unduly large proportion of persons who speak only English, meaning that Francophone representation will drop rather than increase in the executive and technical classifications.

It costs the taxpayers $29,000 to teach the second of ficial language to one civil servant, and the failure rate still is 92 per cent.

The task force found that in a four-year period ending in the spring of 1970, a total of 6,463 public servants dropped out of the language courses without qualifying for any credits.

This represented a 'lost investment' of $17-million con-

RYAN DEMANDS INVESTIGATION

Times News Services

Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, is asking language commissioner Keith Spicer to investigate reports that federal agencies and departments regularly violate the Official Languages Act.

In a registered letter mailed Wednesday night, Ryan cited confidential government reports obtained and used by his Montreal daily, charging that bilingualism policies are threatened with "total failure."

He enclosed the documents with his letter and reminded Spicer that any Canadian citizen can request an investigation into alleged language inequities under Section 26 of the act.

Ryan's letter to Spicer, which appears on Le Devoir's editorial page, says French-speaking public servants have lost ground under the Liberal government, despite "astronomical" expenditures on language programs.

Meanwhile, treasury Board President C. M. Drury said today statistics contained in the report are outdated. The 1975 target date for a functionally bilingual public service "still appears to be realistic."

He said the studies published by the newspaper were for the purpose of gathering information as the basis for the report, and were never intended for publication.

Drury said it is "embarrassing" when papers not designed for public consumption are published in newspapers, and his department is trying to discover how the leak occurred.

Tories Unveil Tax Plan

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

TORONTO — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield today unveiled a far-reaching plan that would allow individual Canadians to defer income tax payments to the federal government and invest it in small Canadian-owned businesses.

Stanfield, speaking to the influential Empire Club meeting at the Royal York Hotel here, said his party's Canadian investment credit incentive plan would do more in a single year to stimulate the economy and create new jobs than any combination of government handouts and incentives now available.

The Conservative leader, in his major economic speech of the election campaign to date, told his 1,400-strong audience of businessmen the plan will allow the individual Canadian the same tax deferment opportunities now available to large corporations.

Stanfield said that as well as giving opportunities for investment to the average Canadian it would also provide much-needed pools of capital to small Canadian businesses wanting to expand.

Under the plan, the taxpayer would have the option of paying his total income tax bill to the revenue department or withholding some of it for approved investment in small business enterprises.

When the investor decided to pull his stakes out of the company he would then return his deferred tax money to the federal government and pay capital gains tax on his profits.

In simple terms, the plan enables the taxpayer to make profits on money he would normally give to Ottawa.

"This investment credit will be available to any Canadian citizen who makes a direct investment in the equity of a Canadian-owned business.

"The credit, which will be 50 per cent of qualified investment to a maximum $5,000 each year, will be either offset against the individual's income tax for the year or rebated direct to him.

Star Cuts Liberals

Times News Services

TORONTO — Toronto Star said today in an editorial that on the basis of the issues of unemployment and Canadian independence it has withdrawn its support from the Liberals for the first time in 50 years.

"Of the alternatives, both of which are unattractive, we prefer the Conservatives," the editorial said.

The editorial, over the initials of president and publisher Beland Honderich, said The Star has consistently supported the Liberals since the early 1920s "in the belief that the things this paper has stood for — unemployment insurance, health insurance, Canadian independence and the like — would most likely be achieved through a Liberal government."

"The performance of the Trudeau government over the past four years, particularly in the broad economic area, has forced us to re-examine this traditional performance. We have now concluded, reluctantly, that we must register a strong protest against the government's stand on economic policy and Canadian independence."

Your Federal Candidates

Starting today and running through next Tuesday, the Times in this space will present in-depth interviews by staff reporters with the 10 candidates for election in the Oct. 30 federal election for the two seats in the Greater Victoria area.

In these interviews the candidates express their views and are questioned on the issues. Two interviews will be presented each day and the order of appearance was decided by a random draw.

TISDALLE Esquimalt-Saanich

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Never have so few people owned so much and done so little with it.

The paraphrase of Winston Churchill's famous words was coined by Esquimalt-Saanich candidate John Tisdalle, and his belief in that statement is equalled only by the conviction that Social Credit's fiscal policies are the sole hope of rephrasing it.

"That's what inspires me and drives me on to the federal field, where the machinery exists to make changes," he says.

"My greatest concern all my life has been the paradox that a country — populated originally, when I could first figure out figures, by 10 million people and now by 20 million living in half a continent — faces misery, starvation and want and yet has the greatest wealth in the world."

Tisdalle, 55, is something unique — a longtime Socred ex-member of the provincial legislature who did not receive the kiss of death from the oh-so-unpredictable voters in last August's provincial election.

His downfall came earlier in a less spectacular but perhaps more pointed way, when, after representing Saanich and The Islands for 19 years, he failed to get the nomination from disenchanted constituency Socreds.

But now, re-appearing phoenix-like after getting the nod for the federal contest in preference to vanquished MLA Herb Bruch, Tisdalle says he didn't regard that earlier turn-down as a rude rebuff, just "pure and simple politics."

Pressed for an explanation, he speculates the voting was

Times Staff

Incumbent Liberal MP for Victoria, David Groos, sees himself as the guardian of ecology on this coast in spite of the fact that he spends most of the time away from it in Ottawa and abroad as a Canadian government representative.

He says that the threatened oil tanker route and danger of pollution is viewed as a "purely western" problem in Ottawa.

He gives his main reason for running again to straighten out the complete problem of control of traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

"There are certain things that will not be done," he says, "unless I'm there sitting on top of it."

He lists some of them — harbors of refuge, switching of responsibility for pollution clean-up and marine rescue to the Canadian Armed Forces, instead of the Ministry of Transport.

The 54-year-old ex-navy captain wears his clothes casually, and flashes an affable smile. The combination gives the impression of a man easy to approach.

But some complain he's a hard man to reach. An unlisted home phone number (Groos retains an answering service) means only intimates can contact him directly.

"I have a wife and four kids. My number was listed for the first three years. I couldn't expect them to take all the calls."

He says it's not the number of calls that bothered him. It

Inflation, Strike Cut Pound

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to its lowest level in 22 months today under a wave of selling orders from continental centres. In two hours of hectic trading it dropped 1.5 cents.

Dealers said the pound apparently came under attack as a result of inflation and the threat of a national power strike. (See Page 33).

This was its lowest level since December, 1970. Sterling had lost more than 15 cents since June 22, when the British government freed the pound to float to halt a run on the pound.

Meanwhile in Paris, the nine nations of the European Common Market met at the summit today to celebrate their growth and plan their future but immediately split over the issue of unity.

After smiles and waves to spectators leaders of the 250-million-person community marched indoors and issued statements lauding their growing wealth and vowing to avoid battling other trade bloc powers, principally the United States.
